Defense Cuts Go Too Far, Ike Informs Senators

Eisenhower Favors Moderate Increase For Antisub Forces, Air Power Bases

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday backed a moderate expansion of the 1951 defense budget to strengthen the Nation's air power, Alaskan bases and antisubmarine forces.

He told the Senate Appropriations Committee that while "major and radical" boosts in military spending are not warranted, we are "taking chances" today by economizing "a bit too far" in these fields.

Pressed by Senators for a definite recommendation on increasing '51 defense funds, he "guessed" 500 million dollars more should be provided.

Perhaps much can be done, however, by readjustments within the present budget, he added.

Ike's testimony, given before a jam-packed, open-committee session, sparked a drive to increase the pending 13-million-dolar military budget, largely for additional warplane orders.

The former Army chief praised Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's economy program and warned particularly of the danger of destroying our national economy by overspending on defense.

"We are fairly well on the proper line between economy and security," he said, "but in certain details we've been a bit careless."

The general made it plain that he did not go along entirely with Johnson's suggestions that the cutback 13-billion-dollar '51 spending program was "Eisenhower's budget."

"I was the carpenter," Ike declared. "Someone else was the architect."

Explaining his role in preparing the budget, Eisenhower said the late Defense Secretary James Forrestal called him to Washington in late 1948 to work on the 1951 spending program.

He devoted six months to a plan calling for an "outside limit" of 15 billion dollars, including one billion stockpiling, with approval from above, Ike said, when he was told by Johnson that President Truman had ordered this ceiling cut by "about another billion dollars."

The general added that he had then worked out the details of distributing this 13 billion Pentagon budget between the services.

Eisenhower did not advocate increasing the number of Air Force groups beyond the present 48 in regular service and 12 in the National Guard, but stressed the need for additional aircraft procurement money to keep them modern.

The Senate committee called the president of Columbia University to explain a recent state-

Striner Fined $20,000, Given 6-Month Term

District Businessman Convicted of Evading $56,000 Income Taxes

Baltimore, Md., March 29. (Spl.)—Benjamin Striner, 41, Washington business and civic figure, drew a 6-month sentence and a $20,000 fine today for Federal income tax evasion.

Chief Judge William C. Coleman, in Federal Court here, sentenced him to 6 months imprisonment on two counts, the terms to run concurrently.

The fine was $5000 for each of the four years from 1942 through 1945 during which he short-changed the Government by $56,817, according to the indictment.

Striner, president of the North Washington Council of Citizens Associations in Washington, did not appear upset. He left the courtroom smiling.

In sentencing Striner, Judge Coleman pointed out that although the former Washington druggist has already made an adjustment of some $56,000 on his tax return, he still owes the Federal Government about $75,000 in taxes, fraud penalties and interest.

Before sentencing, Judge Coleman asked Striner if he had anything to say.

"I believe I have gotten a fair trial," said Striner, "and I am now in your hands."

Striner, who had contended during his trial that because of inadequate help and poor health he never really knew how much he was making at the pharmacy he once operated at 2921 Nichols ave. se., then heard Judge Coleman say:

"I find no weighty extenuating circumstances. You fabricated a story which sounded most fictitious to the court and certainly to the jury."

Counsel for Striner requested a two-day delay before Striner must begin his sentence so that he could put his business affairs in order. Judge Coleman denied the request, declaring Striner had ample time during the trial to do this.

A-Bomb Stockpile Of U. S. Estimated From 200 to 300

By the United Press

The magazine New Republic estimated yesterday that the United States has a supply of 200 to 300 atom bombs. It said Russia should have "at least 100 bombs by the beginning of 1955."

It said that "published data" allowed "reasonable estimates" of American A-bomb production rates and the size of the present U. S. stockpile. It cited estimates made by Business Week, a magazine, and the Armed Forces Chemical Journal last year putting A-bomb production at about 50 a year.

Kerr Gas Bill Wins Senate Vote, 44-38

Parties Split; Issue In Campaign Seen; Douglas Predicts Consumer Price Rise

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate by a vote of 44 to 38 yesterday passed the bitterly controversial Kerr natural gas bill exempting so-called independent gas producers from Federal price regulation.

The bill, viewed by some Republicans as 1950 campaign ammunition, now goes to conference with the House, which passed similar legislation last year.

Party lines split on the vote, but a GOP majority of 22 lined up with a 16-man Democratic minority against the bill. Twenty-eight Democrats voted with 16 Republicans for it.

During two weeks of debate, opponents of the legislation, headed by Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), charged the exemption will mean higher prices for gas consumers and increased profits for the big oil and gas companies.

Boyle Reported Opposed

Proponents of the bill, led by Senator Robert S. Kerr, (D., Okla.), himself an oil and gas producer, countered that prices would be held in line by increased gas production and competition in the industry.

Once a conference version of the bill clears Congress, the last word is up to the President.

Kerr bill supporters have indicated their version is satisfactory to the White House. National Democratic Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., however, was recently reported strongly opposed to the measure. Douglas, in a Mutual System broadcast last night asked that Mr. Truman veto the bill.

Yesterday's preponderance of Republican votes against the legislation indicated but one thing, in the opinion of most observers. If the President signs the bill, the GOP will charge him with coddling his own favorite campaign target, "the special interests."

Under the bill's terms, the independent gas producers exempted must have no affiliation with interstate pipelines and have no distribution system of their own. They sell to the distributors.

Regulates Pipelines

At present the Federal Power Commission regulates only the pipeline companies which move the natural gas in interstate commerce. A majority of the FPC however is now said to feel it has the authority to regulate the independents, and the legislation was designed to forestall such a move.

Before passing the gas bill, the Senate approved by a vote of 44 to 38 a substitute by Kerr making one concession to the opposition —authority for a continuing study by the FPC to determine whether gas prices or supplies are being affected adversely by lack of competition among gas producers.

Opponents replied that this was merely "surplusage"—that the FPC already has authority to make such surveys and is exercising it.

They made two separate attempts on the Senate floor to write more authority for the commission into the Kerr substitute, but lost both counts:

1. An amendment by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) to lift the exemption whenever the FPC finds evidence of price-fixing. This failed on a voice vote.

2. An amendment by Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) authorizing the commission to act if gas prices rise "unduly." This was rejected, 49 to 33.

The first test, roughly ranging most legislators from the oil and gas-producing Southwest against Senators from the consuming North and East, came when the

Red Charges Stir Anger In Congress

Democrats Defend State Department; McCarthy to Take Senate Floor Today

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Small flurries of angry argument blew through both chambers of Congress yesterday over Senator McCarthy's (R., Wis.) charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

The debate, however, was mostly by way of marking time until McCarthy himself takes the Senate floor, as he plans to do today, to give further information about Owen J. Lattimore. He has charged Lattimore with being the "top Soviet espionage agent" in the United States.

Lattimore, a Johns Hopkins University professor and authority on the Orient, is en route home from a United Nations mission in Afghanistan. He has characterized the charge as "pure moonshine."

Will Be Heard Tuesday

He will have a chance to be heard on the charges Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating McCarthy's charges.

Meantime, Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, called on the subcommittee to turn over the names of all Government employes accused by McCarthy. The review board has been charged by President Truman with making a "complete and detailed review" of all the cases cited.

While Republican subcommittee members expressed reluctance to hand over the names, the Democratic majority of the subcommittee was expected to comply promptly.

At the same time, the Senate sergeant-at-arms formally, if futilely, delivered subpenas from that subcommittee on the heads of three Federal agencies for the loyalty files on 90-odd people McCarthy has accused.

He served them on Secretary of State Acheson, Civil Service Commission President Harry B. Mitchell, and on Peyton Ford, acting for Attorney General McGrath.

These officials will obviously comply with standing orders from President Truman to decline the requests for the files and turn the subpenas over to him. And, as he has made quite plain, he will not honor them.

Contempt Finding Unlikely

When that happens, some Republicans may try to find the President in contempt of the Senate—an unlikely finding in view of the Democratic majority in that body.

In any event, further action, in the courts, would drag out two or three years. It would be taken against a series of court precedents over 150 years, all upholding the right of the President to withhold from Congress such documents as he decides must, in the public interest, be kept secret.

Senator Green (D., R. I.), acting head of the Senate investigating committee in the absence overseas of Chairman Tydings (D., Md.), told newsmen he thinks Mr. Truman is "quite right" in his stand on the files.

Fogarty Provision Carries, 99 to 66; Billion Earmarked For Farm Products

By Ferdinand Kuhn

In playful mood, the House voted yesterday to cut off every nickel of Marshall Plan funds from Britain until the partition of Ireland is ended.

The vote took place in a St. Patrick's Day atmosphere after only 20 minutes of debate. Members joked and laughed as they trooped up the center aisle to have their votes counted by tellers.

The count was 99 to 66, but, as the House was meeting as a committee of the whole, the vote can be reversed on a roll-call later in the week, perhaps today.

If the full House, and then the Senate should sustain it, Britain would lose an estimated 687 million dollars in American aid in the next fiscal year and would be plunged into certain economic crisis.

Nobody seemed to take the vote very seriously—nobody, that is, except House leaders who were angry and Government officials who were aghast at the damage they saw done to American foreign policy. They felt the damage would remain even though the vote probably would be reversed.

For months the Administration has been trying to give Europe and Asia a sense of American strength and steadiness as counterweights to Soviet pressure. Last night the news of the House vote sped abroad by cable and radio, and officials felt sure it would implant new doubt and bewilderment among foreign peoples.

In this sense they regarded the snap vote on Ireland as serious—even more serious than another vote yesterday to earmark at least a billion dollars of Marshall Plan

Jury Convicts Man in Wife's Bayonet Death

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Frederick R. (Buck) Ramey, 22, was convicted by a District Court jury at 8:55 last night of manslaughter in the fatal bayoneting of his 20-year-old wife.

The crime carries a maximum penalty of from 5 to 15 years imprisonment. Judge James W. Morris remanded the defendant to jail but did not set a sentencing date.

The jurors received the case at 2:13 p. m. They returned the manslaughter verdict within 10 minutes after the judge had given them the "Allen Charge," advising individual jurymen to listen with due consideration to the views of their fellow talesmen.

Ramey was indicted on a second-degree murder charge, the Government contending that his act in killing Mrs. Maytriss Marie Ramey, his wife, and mother of their two infants, was so "wanton and reckless" as to amount to murder with "malice aforethought."

Mrs. Ramey was killed February 8 during the party celebrating her birthday. After a spat with Ramey, she closed the bathroom door behind her.

Ramey attached an 18-inch bayonet to a Jap souvenir rifle, and drove the blade through the door. The wife was found slumped against the door with a 10-inch gash caused by the bayonet through her back.

The defendant is an Army veteran with a "blue" discharge, which is neither honorable nor dishonorable. He resided with his

Secretary of State Dean Acheson reportedly told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a closed session yesterday that he would press Great Britain and France for a more vigorous and unified program of action against communism in the Far East.

He said he would urge British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman at the big three meeting in London in May to bring their Far Eastern policies more in line with those of the United States, according to a Senator who asked that his name not be used.

It is no secret that the State Department fears that Moscow will exploit the differences between the United States and Great Britain over the latter's recognition of Communist China. Also bothersome is the failure to reach a broad

Labor Government Loses in Vote on Technical Issue

London, March 29 (AP).—Winston Churchill's Conservatives handed the Labor government its first defeat in Commons tonight, but it was on a technical issue and does not mean the overturning of Prime Minister Clement Attlee's cabinet.

The government was defeated, 283 to 257, on a motion for adjournment.

The Conservatives forced the technical issue to a vote in a surprise move. It apparently was part of Conservative strategy to keep under pressure the slim majority of three which Labor now holds.

After the vote was announced there were cries of "Resign" and "We are the masters now" from the Conservative side.

Unions to Fight Red Sabotage Of Arms Aid

Communist efforts to sabotage American arms shipments to the Atlantic Pact nations of Europe will be fought with force, if necessary—by newly-formed "vigilante committees" of the free trade unions, it was disclosed yesterday.

The disclosure came as the Department of Defense announced that the first shipment of army equipment under the mutual defense assistance program of the North Atlantic treaty nations will leave New York Friday. Destination of the shipment, which includes heavy artillery, was not revealed.

Two leaders of the world-wide anti-Communist labor movement, visiting Washington yesterday, revealed that the democratic unions of Europe are taking seriously Communist threats to block and bottle up the Atlantic Pact shipments, and are already taking counter-measures.

They said: "Our longshoremen and sailors will not sit back and let the Communists take over the ports. We will take the offensive and fight the Communists with their own weapons of force. We will fight them in the open. We will battle them in the streets and docks."

Disclosure of the union action to balk the Communists' avowed plan to sabotage the Atlantic Pact arms shipments was made by J. H. Oldenbrook, secretary general of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The ICFTU was set up last year, in large measure through the joint efforts of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, as a rival to the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions. The ITF is a world-wide organization of unions in the field of transportation and also has the blessing of the AFL and CIO.

Britons Miss Vote, See Queen Mary's Rug

The British Embassy chose an odd moment yesterday to display the rug which 82-year-old Queen Mary had made as her personal effort to earn more dollars for her country.

Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks was making a graceful speech about the rug at the very moment when the House was voting to cut Britain off from hundreds of millions of dollars because of Ireland.

The rug was on view at the Smithsonian Institution. Most of the British correspondents in Washington were there instead of the House gallery at the time of the vote. The Queen Mother had spent four years making the rug, which is being offered for sale here to help close the British dollar gap.

Red German Youth Trained to Fight, U. S. Report Says

Berlin, March 29 (NYHT.)—Members of the "Free German Youth," which is sponsoring a march on Berlin at the end of May, are being given military and revolutionary training, including instruction in guerilla warfare, according to an official American report issued here today.

The report said youths between the ages of 16 and 18 are being trained.

All physically able male members of the Communist youth movement, according to the report, will soon be drafted for two months of training in police service. This was interpreted as a move toward general and obligatory paramilitary police service.

Autopsy Shows Head Injury

Navy Seeks Murder Clews In Arlington Death of Chief

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

A Navy board of investigation yesterday began probing for murder clews in the mysterious death early Sunday of a chief gunner's mate at Quarters K in Arlington.

An autopsy performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital on the 41-year-old Navy man, Wesley C. Thompson, touched off the investigation.

Navy authorities said Thompson was found slumped on the floor of the master-at-arms office in one of the 19 barracks buildings at 1:05 a. m.

Preliminary diagnosis attributed his death to cerebral hemorrhage. But the autopsy report indicated that "death was probably not due to natural causes, but apparently to a head injury."

Thompson, who lived with his wife and two children at 4902 1st st., Temple Hills, Md., had been transferred from Quarters I in West Potomac Park a few days before his death. He had not reported for duty when he was found dead, but was scheduled to stand watch sometime Sunday, the Navy said.

Quarters K is situated between the Pentagon and the Navy annex.

Mrs. Thompson, 25, told The Washington Post she last saw her husband at 11 a. m. Friday when he told her he was going on duty

Stepped-up Attack on Slums In District Is Blueprinted

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A program to step up drastically the District government's attack on substandard housing, largely through strengthened Condemnation Board proceedings, has been blueprinted by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

Some highlights of his memorandum for "ameliorating slum conditions" are understood to include:

1. More Condemnation Board personnel (now before Congress for approval) to permit more fix-up-or-close-up actions against below-standard dwellings each year, instead of the average of 83 cases now handled annually.

Proceeding at the present rate, it would take 60 years to work through the estimated 5000 worst cases of occupied housing units, General Young reportedly has said.

2. Means should be found to permit the Board to take action against such defects as broken-down sheds, wooden fences, outside toilets, poor ventilation and heating conditions on which the Board heretofore has assumed a hands-off policy.

3. Coordinated checkup on all types of housing defects by police, health and sanitation officials so that messy yards, trash and fire hazards may be detected and acted against. (The Board's domain is limited to "structurally" insanitary buildings.)

4. The Board should concentrate on blocks or large groups of substandard housing rather than moving against individual houses on which it has received complaints. The block approach, similar to the Baltimore plan, would have the advantage of encouraging voluntary rehabilitation efforts, if for no other reason, "to keep up with the Joneses."

5. Vigorous go-ahead on the two experimental slum clean-up blocks, now underway. They are the block, bounded by U, V and 17th sts., and Florida ave. nw., where owners are being urged voluntarily to improve conditions; and the 400 block of Delaware ave. sw., where both property rehabilitation

Senate Committee Proposes $2 Billions Additional for CCC

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday recommended that the Commodity Credit Corporation be given an additional two billion dollars to carry on the Government's farm price support program.

CCC has about used up the 4750 million dollars for price supports it was granted when the program was put into effect.

It was the second time the bill had been approved by the committee. It was sent back the first time to take out an amendment by Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) that would have required CCC to make all Government grain purchases through grain commission men. The provision was objected to by Secretary Charles F. Brannan, who said the amendment would increase costs and hinder CCC dealings.

The measure retains, however, an amendment by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) to bar foreign imports of farm products when they compete with domestic products under price supports. Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) reported the committee voted unanimously for the Magnuson proposal.

A similar amendment last session was killed in conference after being passed by the Senate. It is opposed by the State Department, on the grounds it would interfere with Pittsburgh, March 29 (AP).—A Washington man paid more than $500,000 for a plot of land in downtown Pittsburgh which will be the site for a 20-story apartment building, deeds showed today.

Sellers of the plot located at Grant st. and Bigelow blvd. were the Hearst Publishing Co. and the Penn-Pittsburgh Corp.

The buyer is Gustave Ring, head of the Ring Construction Co., Washington, D. C. The Real Estate Co. of Pittsburgh arranged the deal.

Ring's company will break ground immediately for construction of the building, which will include shops, a garage for tenants' cars and 570 apartment units. The total cost will be more than six million dollars.

Patients Killed In Sanitorium Fire Near Philadelphia

Philadelphia, March 29 (AP).—Police said at least eight patients suffocated and 30 others were felled by smoke in a fire that swept the basement of a private sanatorium in nearby Springfield, Montgomery County, tonight.

Nurses led most of the 90 patients through dense smoke from the 40-year-old Belle-Vista Sanatorium for convalescent, senile, nervous and mental patients. The blaze was in a relatively new wing of the L-shaped two-story stone buliding facing the College of Chestnut Hill, on the northern limits of Philadelphia.

There were 43 male patients on the first floor, 33 women on the second floor and about 15 male mental patients in restraining garments in an adjoining dormitory at the rear.

$25,000,000 Ship Repair Outlay Urged

The Maritime Commission and labor unions yesterday urged a 25-million-dollar ship repair program to prevent "demoralization" of American shipyards.

Charles D. Marshall, general manager of the Maritime Commission, told a Senate Merchant Marine subcommittee that ship repair employment in the United States fell from 78,762 in March, 1948, to 22,157 in December, 1949.

As a stop-gap measure, he said, the commission has recommended spending 25 million dollars for drydocking, surveying, inspecting and repairing 134 vessels now in the commission's laid-up fleet.

This, he estimated, would provide employment for 4500 to 5000 persons for a year.

"It is necessary to tide the ship repair industry over a crucial period of adjustment," he said. "In addition, it is considered necessary in the interest of national defense."

The subcommittee, which is looking into maritime problems, was told that ship repair employment has declined for these reasons:

The postwar reconversion program has been completed; foreign vessels no longer are being repaired in United States' yards; more foreign shipyards are reentering the repair business; fewer United States ships need repairs because fewer United States ships are being operated and many of those operated are newer ships.

James A. Brownlow, secretary-treasurer of the AFL Metal Trades Workers, and Maywood Boggs, Washington representative of the AFL Boiler Workers, generally indorsed Marshall's testimony.

Brownlow, predicting catastrophe for the ship repair industry unless something is done quickly, said that "the United States should never be dependent upon other nations for the repair of its merchant marine fleet."

Pittsburgh, March 29 (U.P.).—CIO President Philip Murray warned today that the number of unemployed is only 316,000 away from the danger mark set up by the President's Economic Advisory Council.

The council has said that the national economy would be in danger when unemployment reached five millions.

"As of February, 1950, there were 4,684,000 unemployed compared to 3,321,000 in February, 1949," Murray said. "We are only 316,000 away from the danger mark."

The CIO leader, speaking before the CIO Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, said the steel industry alone spent 1,500 billion dollars on plant improvements, "not primarily to increase production, but to increase profit and per capita production."

"That results in the lay-off of men," he said. "And thousands are being laid off today. The machine is displacing the man."

Murray said organized labor favors new machinery which improves man's lot but declared that "labor is not going to sit idly by to permit the widespread introduction of machines to starve them to death."

Murray said that unless something is done to ease unemployment, the "crisis" will become more critical from day to day. He said that in 1944, one out of every 77 workers was without a job.

"Today there is one out of each 13."

He said that while unemployment is growing, industry as a whole is obtaining bigger and bigger profits.

In 1949, he said, net corporate profits after taxes were $16,000,700,000. In 1939 which he described as a "good year," it was $8,000,400,000 and in 1950, he estimated it will be 18 billion dollars.

Murray said the "critics of the so-called Fair Deal Administration who claim we are heading into a state of socialism are the people who get the most out of our Government."

He cited the high profits of General Motors and U. S. Steel and declared: "God bring that kind of GM profit-making to the people—disperse those profits."

unions dominate important waterfront areas of France and Italy, according to the visiting labor leaders. In these ports, the Reds have incessantly sought to tie up and foul up Marshall Plan shipments, and will make even more strenuous efforts to balk the Atlantic Pact arms ships, they said.

Only recently, Becu said, two ships were forced to divert their scheduled landings near Bordeaux, France, to Antwerp, Belgium, because the Communist maritime unions at the former port announced they would permit no unloading of the ships in the mistaken belief that the vessels were carrying Atlantic Pact armaments.

Some Gains Against Reds

The democratic unions have already made substantial headway against the Communist influence in the ports of Europe, according to Becu, through rank-and-file revolts, through elections, and sometimes through physical force, as when the Reds were driven out of power in the great port city of Antwerp.

The transport federation leader expressed amazement at what he described as American insistence on shipping Marshall Plan goods for Italy to the Communist-dominated port of Genoa instead of the Communist-cleared port of Naples.

He said a labor delegation will call on the State Department today to urge a transfer of the shipments to Naples. "Such a move will not only give work to the unemployed pro-democratic maritime workers of Naples," said Becu, "it will also break the Communist hold over the unions of Genoa."

At a Statler luncheon sponsored jointly by the AFL and CIO, Secretary-General Oldenbroek announced that the ICFTU was sending a delegation of labor leaders on a two-month tour of Asia and the Far East, preparatory to establishing a college to train trade union officials and stimulate the organizing of workers in that area of the world.

Oldenbroek said the ICFTU would fight the Communists on every possible labor front.

"We shall deliver our message behind the Iron Curtain," he pledged. "We shall give the workers now living under the Communist iron heel moral support and whatever material support that we can."

reciprocal trade agreements with other countries.

The Senate committee action highlighted a day filled with the following farm law developments:

1. The Agriculture Department reported that the prices of farm commodities remained unchanged during the month ending March 15, but that things farmers buy increased nearly one percent. The result was the parity price for farm products went down to 95—the lowest since 1941 except for last January.

Parity is the price farm commodities bring compared with the cost of labor or other products.

2. A new farm plan, drawn up by the Association of Southern Agriculture Commissioners, was inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative Henry D. Larcade, jr., (D., La.). It is the fourth new farm plan to be printed in the Congressional Record since January. Larcade said he took that method to get attention for the plan, after the House Agriculture Committee had refused it a hearing.

3. The House Agriculture Committee today will begin a study of how best to give away surplus farm commodities. Present giveaway programs are upsetting local businesses in many areas, complaints at the Agriculture Department say. The first witness will be Ralph S. Trigg, administrator of the price support program.

Republicans Assail NLRB Revamp Plan

President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12 would set an "ill-advised" precedent for settling controversies within Government agencies, the seven Republican members of the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments declared yesterday.

The minority report urged the House to reject, by the necessary constitutional majority, Plan No. 12, which would abolish the independent office of general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transfer its functions to the five-man board.

General Counsel Robert Denham has been attacked as anti-labor; the board has been attacked as antiemployer.

Acceptance of the plan would invite the President to yield to the most insistent and persuasive agency or group every time there was a controversy in any branch of the executive department, and send to Congress a plan embodying the views of the "disgruntled group," the minority contended.

The minority questioned the propriety of the plan as seeking to circumvent the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act, which gives prosecuting powers to the general counsel and judicial powers to the board.

The Democratic majority of the committee, which approved the plan, said its viewpoint was well-supported by ample testimony.

The majority report declared: "It has been consistently demonstrated that the two-headed nature of this agency, with its parallel by dissimilar policy determinations, has led to a disrupted internal agency structure. Moreover, the resultant division of responsibility has led to confusion among the agency personnel, litigants and the general public.

The majority insisted that Plan No. 12 leaves "undisturbed" the "substantive provisions" of the Taft-Hartley Act and is "but one facet of a uniform approach to improved organization . . . of regulatory commissions."

Pension Field In Industry Seen Limited

Cincinnati, March 29 (AP).—Only a few industries—such as basic food and public utilities—are stable enough to assure pensions out of current revenue, Carroll R. Daugherty, chairman of the Presidential Steel Board, said today.

Daugherty, who also is professor of business economics at Northwestern University, made the statement in an address before the pension conference sponsored by the Cincinnati, Ohio, and U. S. Chambers of Commerce.

"The safest and least expensive way of providing retirement benefits in a country like the United States is to have only, or mainly, an adequate Federal plan of universal coverage," he declared. "The cheapest way to finance pensions is pay-as-you-go, that is, out of current revenue. The Government is the only organization strong and big enough to avoid the necessity of funding past-service liability.

"Even under a Federal plan, the level of benefits must be modest. Otherwise, there will be too great a restriction on the present consumption of those who have jobs. The hard, economic fact is that, with existing resources, the cost of pensions is some amount of present consumption foregone by non-pensioners currently employed."

Daugherty added that under a universal Federal plan, another social cost is avoided; namely, an additional barrier to labor mobility."

Walter G. Barlow, vice president and managing editor of the Public Opinion Index For Industry, Opinion Research Corp., Princeton, N. J., said that interviews with workers indicate that they prefer to receive old-age pension help not from the Government, but from their own companies.

House to Get New School Bill In Few Days

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

One subcommittee of the House Labor Committee is preparing to report a noncontroversial school-aid bill within the next few days.

The measure, however, deals only with the problem of those school districts in which the activities of the Federal Government have caused such an impact that the community cannot handle the problem created.

The subcommittee, headed by Chairman Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.), has spent months studying the complexities of this situation.

Involved are all the military installations, the atomic energy installations, the U. S. Park Service and other governmental bodies.

Representative Tom Steed (D., Okla.) said yesterday there were tens of thousands of children whose parents are employed by the Government who are not getting "a good break" on education.

The type of problem presented is almost as varied as the number of different types of Government installations. For example, when the Government builds an airport in a rural area as many as 500 children may come into a rural school district with their parents. The airport property is off the tax rolls and the area in question lacks sufficient funds to educate the sudden influx of new children.

The bill now under study by the committee would put the entire program under the U. S. Office of Education. At the present time, the Government is spending some 17 million dollars in different scattered programs to help meet the need.

The measure, Steed said, would call for a greater expenditure than this.

There appeared to be general agreement that this is the one school bill so far about which there is little controversy, although its technical complexities have been great.

Digges Indorsed For Reelection To Court in Md.

Unanimous indorsement of Judge J. Dudley Digges for reelection as associate judge of the Seventh Maryland Judicial Circuit has been voted by the Prince Georges County Bar Association, Ralph W. Powers, president, announced yesterday.

Judge Digges, who is 38, was appointed last year by Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., to the unexpired term of Judge William M. Loker, retired, and is one of the youngest judges in Maryland.

Judge Digges, who resides at La Plata, is a former law partner of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), and practiced in Upper Marlboro before his appointment.

Truman Picks Lawton to Head Budget Bureau, Pace for Army

Frederick J. Lawton, the 49-year-old Washingtonian who started his Federal service at 19 as a Treasury stenographer, will be the next director of the powerful Budget Bureau.

White House sources yesterday revealed the President had picked the outstanding career civil servant to head the Budget Bureau. Frank Pace, the present director, will succeed Gordon Gray as Secretary of the Army. The Pace-Lawton switch was revealed Tuesday in The Washington Post's Federal Diary column.

As Budget Director, Lawton, will have the President's ear. A check over the past several years shows that the Budget Bureau chief confers with the President more frequently than any other official, including Cabinet members. The Budget Director must get the Administration's policy signals from the President as well as discuss the Federal budget in detail with him.

A civil servant who worked his way up the ladder, Lawton had a fight with his inner self before he put himself in a position that led to Budget Director. For years, he had been an administrative assistant to the Budget Director, a position in which he conducted the day-to-day operations of the Budget Bureau. That, he considered, was a "safe" Civil Service job. He repeatedly rejected suggestions that he be appointed Assistant Director.

It took President Truman to talk Lawton out of his "safe" job. In April, 1948, Lawton accepted an appointment as an administrative assistant and "trouble-shooter" to the President. That was the year most people didn't give the President a chance for reelection, but Lawton had confidence in him and that confidence has been rewarded.

A year ago Lawton returned to the Budget Bureau to what he once considered a "political" job, the No. 2 post as assistant director. Now he moves up to the No. 1 slot, and one of the most important jobs in Government.

The new budget chief held clerical jobs in Census and Postoffice before he went back to Treasury in 1929 in an administrative post. He went to the Budget Bureau in 1935.

Born November 11, 1900, Lawton was graduated from Gonzaga High School in 1934, attending classes after work. He played tackle on the Gonzaga football team and he still follows sports.

Lawton is married and has three children, two girls and a boy. He is active in Catholic organizations.

Congressmen Score Legion For 'Pressure'

By the United Press

Some members of the House Executive Expenditures Committee denounced the American Legion yesterday for using election-year "pressure tactics" on Congress in an effort to scuttle a Federal hospital reorganization plan.

Legion Commander George N. Craig appeared before the committee to oppose the Hoover Commission's plan to combine medical functions of the Veterans Administration, the armed forces and the U. S. Public Health Service in a united medical administration.

Craig said the proposal would "dismember" the Veterans Administration and "disturb a program that in the main is functioning satisfactorily." He opposed giving the VA's hospital program to a "new and untried" agency.

After he finished reading his prepared statement, Democratic and Republican committee members joined in criticizing the Legion for sending "threatening" letters to Congressmen in an election year.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), sponsor of a bill embodying the reorganization plan, asked Craig whether the Legion was trying to exert political pressure by writing its members to "come out fighting with brass knuckles" against the proposal.

Craig acknowledged that the term "brass knuckles" was "unfortunate" but said the Legion is not trying "to kick anybody around."

Committee Chairman William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), told Craig as a "brother Legionnaire" that the policy of sending "threatening letters will not get the response you want."

Reaction to Secrecy Doesn't Worry AEC

THOMAS E. MURRAY
His approval as AEC commissioner by Senate is expected after perfunctory questioning yesterday before Congressional Atomic Commitee

The prospect that secrecy rules on atomic projects will drive university laboratories out of cooperative programs with the Atomic Energy Commission is not a reason for alarm, the scientist-member of the AEC said yesterday.

At a commission press conference, Dr. Henry D. Smyth was asked whether present agitation about AEC secrecy regulations might result in so much withdrawal by universities from AEC projects that the program might be endangered.

Without commenting on whether universities would take this position, following the recent lead of the University of Syracuse, Smyth said his opinion was that it was more useful for those laboratories to train students in basic science. Then, 10 or 15 years hence, they would be in a position to make original contributions to nuclear work for defense, if needed.

But, he explained, it is inordinately difficult to train students in places that are also conducting secret research, such as those with contracts with the AEC. He intimated there would be enough industrial and Government laboratories to handle secret projects, without having to rely too heavily on university facilities where students, not cleared for secret matter, were being trained.

If the present situation were like that during the war, where intensive effort was required in the next year or two, and with no immediate concern for the position a decade hence, Smyth said, his opinion would be different.

The subject arose from reporters' questions to Smyth and acting AEC Chairman Sumner T. Pike about two telegrams recently sent by the AEC to all commission consultants and contractors engaged in secret work.

The first, which aroused a flurry of resentment by its blunt tone, told all personnel in effect to "keep your trap shut" about hydrogen-explosive reactions related to weapons, even though the information might be nonsecret.

Second Adds "Please"

The second telegram, more or less in the tone of "please, keep your trap shut," explained that talk about even nonsecret aspects of the hydrogen reaction might be interpreted as reflecting what the AEC was doing, by reason of the speaker's association with an AEC project. Two professors at Syracuse objected, and the university announced it would accept no more secret projects from the AEC.

First organization to have trouble with the rule was the magazine Scientific American. Its April issue, released today, contains an article on the hydrogen bomb by Prof. Hans A. Bethe, formerly a division chief of the AEC weapons laboratory at Los Alamos and still a contract consultant to the AEC.

Although none of the technical part of his article was classified, the AEC took exception to parts of it, apparently under the policy of its recent orders. It saw the article in draft when Bethe circulated it to various scientists, including an AEC member.

The AEC asked Scientific American to delete the technical sections. The article was already on the presses, however, and later the AEC modified its request to kill only a few specified paragraphs, according to Gerard Piel, publisher of the magazine.

The request was complied with, Piel said.

The decision having been taken, Bethe said, the best contribution we can now make to peace is to declare that we will not be the first to use the bomb, and will use it only if H-weapons are used against us or our allies.

Reds Say U. S. A-Plan Hurts Other Nations

Moscow, March 29 (AP).—The government newspaper Izvestia declared today the United States-sponsored plan for international control of atomic energy "puts all nations of the world on hunger rations of atomic energy for peaceful purposes."

In a lengthy review of the atomic control issue, Izvestia repeated previous charges that the Baruch plan (outlined by Bernard M. Baruch, former United States representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission) was worked out by American capitalists for their own interests.

The newspaper said the United States is doing everything to prevent the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes at home and, by the Baruch plan, is seeking to enforce such a policy on the rest of the world.

The review based its "hunger rations" charge on the portion of the Baruch plan which proposes that an international control body allocate quotas of atomic materials to each nation for use in peaceful development.

Explaining the Russian position, Izvestia said:

"In the hands of the Soviet people, who are the masters of their own fate, atomic energy can and must be the means for previously unheard-of technical progress for the good of humanity."

(Russia has been opposed to the Baruch plan for international control since it was indorsed by a majority of the United Nations in 1946. The Western powers maintain it is the necessary basis for the establishment of any kind of workable control. It provides for complete inspection of atomic energy work in all countries, with rationing of materials to insure equal distribution, and declares that the U. N. must have the power to punish violators.)

U. S. May Use 'Baby' Airlift On Berlin Run

Berlin, March 29 (U.P.).—Soviet authorities charged tonight that a crew member of a United States military freight train shot up and destroyed a railway traffic signal in the Soviet zone west of Berlin a week ago.

The charge, coming as the Russians imposed another slowdown of highway traffic from the west, caused increased concern in some quarters over the possibility of a new full-scale blockade, although American transport chief Charles A. Dix said he was not alarmed.

At the same time, United States officials maapped plans for a "baby airlift" in make up for the slowdown in highway traffic. Ten cargo flights of American planes would be made in and out of Berlin daily.

This would insure the movement of goods that might be delayed for hours, or even confiscated, at a Soviet checkpoint.

The accusation against the American soldier was contained in a formal note to the United States High Commission in Berlin. American authorities immediately branded it "an utter lie."

"There were no shots fired from that train," an American spokesman said.

German police said the Russian control station at the zonal border town of Helmstedt was allowing Berlin-bound trucks through on the superhighway at the rate of seven an hour—about half the normal rate.

GM, UAW Open Contract Talks Ahead of Schedule

Detroit, March 29 (AP).—General Motors and the CIO United Auto Workers today opened contract talks that will be watched keenly by all American industry and labor.

A joint announcement that bargaining already is under way came as a surprise—a week earlier than expected. It was the earliest possible start for negotiations under the historic cost-of-living agreement now in effect. That expires in 60 days.

Meantime, negotiations at strike-bound Chrysler Corp. were recessed until Monday at the request of Federal and State mediators, amidst reports that the negotiations were hopelessly snarled.

Belgian Crisis Won't Delay U. S. Arms Aid

Brussels, March 29 (U.P.).—American arms shipments to Belgium will arrive on schedule although Parliament has been unable to ratify the Belgo-American military aid treaty because of the crisis over King Leopold, government sources said today.

Atlantic Pact leaders had feared the arms aid program would be thrown out of gear because American arms cannot be shipped until the receiving country has ratified the treaty. Officials said tonight they had found a loophole.

Constitutionally, they said, the government can ratify without Parliament consent treaties which do not jeopardize the national budget.

The first break in the 12-day crisis came today when the Socialists said they were willing to consider Leopold's return provided he promises to abdicate in favor of his 19-year-old son.

Paul Henri Spaak, fromer premier and head of the anti-Leopold Socialists, said the concession should offer the pro-Leopold Social Christians (Catholics) a graceful way out of the present deadlock that has brought strikes and disturbances to Belgium.

The Social Christians want Leopold back on the throne, and although the Socialists are bitterly opposed, Spaak said they will accept his heir, Crown Prince Baudouin. Leopold has been in exile since 1945.

Albert Deveze, leader of the small Liberal Party, was trying to form a government without success as Spaak made his offer in an article in the Socialist Party organ, "Le Peuple."

Corn Products Furnish Clothes, Surgical Sponge, U.S. Chemurgic Parley Told

Post Reporter

Development of surgical sponges which can safely be left in the patient's body was disclosed here yesterday by a Government scientist.

The surgical accessory is made from specially processed cornstarch which body tissues can readily absorb, said Dr. G. E. Hilbert, chief of the Agriculture Department's bureau of agricultural and industrial chemistry.

He displayed the new product at opening session of the 15th annual Chemurgic Conference, at Hotel Statler. Chemurgy is defined as the science of making new uses of agricultural products.

The three-day conference convened formally at an opening luncheon session with a welcoming challenge by President Truman to "put science to work" to maintain good income levels for farmers and higher living standards for all.

Research Financing Urged

The challenge was met by Wheeler McMillen, president of the National Farm Chemurgic Council, of New York City, with a request for research financing similar to the two billion dollars spent for the Manhattan Project in developing the atom bomb.

Dr. Hilbert, in discussing the new uses of cornstarch, said the material is formed by boiling cornstarch to a paste, then freezing it, and finally thawing it and pressing out the water. The sponge product, he said, dries up hard and brittle.

In clinical usage, in New York, the cornstarch sponges are proving as efficient as the rubber varieties now in use, Dr. Hilbert said. They have been used with exceptionally good results in obstetrical cases involving profuse bleeding, he added.

The surgical sponge was only one of a number of recently-developed new products from agricultural crops. Others, modeled by Congressmen's daughters in an amateur fashion show, included raincoats of water-resistant cotton; linen-like cotton dresses, and a variety of clothing now being made from corn.

Truman Indorses Program

President Truman, in his message sent to the conference, urged the chemurgists "to find new ways to use our increasing abundance so as to yield a good income for farmers and at the same time result in a higher standard of living for all our people."

McMillen, without direct reference to Truman's message, said that in the past 20 years the Government has spent $20-billion in agriculture subsidy (price support).

McMillen then advocated "billions for research, and eventually not one cent for subsidies."

"What more splendid economy could be proposed than a 'Manhattan Project' for the kind of creative research that experience has soundly proved could prevent agricultural surpluses (by new products and new uses for surplus crops), abolish the need for agricultural subsidies, and add the blessings of new wealth, new comforts, new abundance and new hopes for all mankind," he declared.

Futile to Argue About Backing Chiang, Mrs. Roosevelt Says

Lake Success, March 29 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today it "seems futile" to argue about backing the Nationalist China government of Chiang Kai-shek.

The late President's widow contended the Chinese conflict is a question for the Chinese people to decide. She stated her views at a luncheon given by the United Nations Correspondents Association.

Mrs. Roosevelt, chairman of the U. N. Commission on Human Rights and an American delegate at every U. N. General Assembly, did not suggest a course for future U. S. policy on China, saying it should be carefully thought out.

She answered questions at the luncheon, devoting much of her time to the Chinese issue. Several hours later she issued an amended statement to the press.

At the luncheon she said this in her comment on China:

"The Nationalist government was given an opportunity to form a representative government. The Nationalists were given an ample opportunity to make reforms and appeal to the masses of the Chinese people. They did not do it. The Communist results cannot be said to be entirely with help from Russia. They largely are based on the weakness of the Nationalist government. To support the Nationalist government seems futile. It is up to the General Assembly to make the decision (on representation) and not other organizations in the U. N." Mrs. Roosevelt agreed this was what she had said.

Then, in the added statement, she said:

"To argue support or nonsupport of the Nationalist government seems futile. This is a question for the Chinese people to decide. It is up to the General Assembly to make the decision (on representation) if other organizations in the U. N. cannot do so."

Woman Arrested Anew on Charge Of Shoplifting

Last February, Katherine DeBrew, 25, of 1408 Swann st. nw. was arrested for shoplifting four blouses from a dime store at 1214 G st. nw.

Tuesday, while awaiting trial on this charge, she went out on another shoplifting foray—this time at a downtown department store, police charge.

Yesterday, Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson sentenced Miss DeBrew to a total of two years in jail—one year for each shoplifting charge.

The loot taken Tuesday supplements the four blouses stolen last month.

Defense Job Progressing, Johnson Says

Amsterdam, March 29 (AP).—United States Defense Secretary Louis Johnson arrived today for a meeting Saturday of Atlantic Pact defense ministers. He was greeted at Schipol Airport by Queen Juliana and Prince Bernard.

Johnson was accompanied by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

In a statement, Johnson said it was the task of himself and the other defense ministers "to rebuild the ramparts that we all watch."

"Already we are making real progress in preparing the defense of Western Europe," he said.

The ministers meet Saturday to pass upon a strategic defense plan adopted yesterday by the chiefs of staffs of the pact nations. Johnson said he saw no controversy.

At The Hague tonight United States Gen. Omar Bradley, who presided at yesterday's meeting of Chiefs of Staffs, said in a statement:

"When we have built up our North Atlantic Treaty organization forces, in my opinion this will greatly increase the security of all of us. This will certainly include the United States."

Plan for Financing Defense Is Drawn Up

London, March 29 (AP).—Atlantic Pact finance ministers adopted recommendations today for meeting the cost of organizing western Europe's defenses.

A communique said the plan would be presented for the guidance of the alliance's 12 defense ministers when they meet at The Hague Saturday to take up military plans prepared by the chiefs of staff.

The finance plans were kept secret inasmuch as they are closely related to military production and defense preparations. One of the important considerations, however, was to make sure that military preparations do not eat into industrial production and national budgets so far as to endanger post-war economic recovery.

Czechs to Expel AP Man

Prague, March 29 (AP).—Nathan Polowetzky, the only American correspondent of the Associated Press remaining in Czechoslovakia, was ordered to leave the country within 10 days.

Four other Western correspondents in Czechoslovakia are expected to learn within a few days whether they will be allowed to stay.

Polowetzky was told by the Foreign Ministry his accreditation will not be renewed when it expires Friday. He was given until April 8 to leave.

The charge was "unobjective reporting." This was the reason given for the expulsion last January of Richard Kasischke, chief of the AP bureau.

The representative of the French Press Agency has been summoned to the Foreign Ministry Thursday to learn whether his accreditation will be renewed.

An hour later Dana Adams Schmidt, New York Times correspondent, is to appear for the same purpose.

John R. Higgins of the United Press has been called to appear Friday.

Robert Biogio of Reuters also is expected to be summoned Thursday or Friday.

All their accreditations expire at the end of the week.

Minister of Information Vaclav Kopecky told Parliament last week Czechoslovakia was weeding out Western newspapermen who "carried out antistate activities."

When the Communists took over in February, 1948, he said, there were 140 accredited foreign newsmen here.

North Ireland Head Replies to O'Dwyer

London, March 29 (NYHT).—Sir Basil Brooke, prime minister of Northern Ireland, who sails for New York Friday, replied today to Mayor William O'Dwyer's St. Patrick's Day statement that the Ulster leader would not be welcome at City Hall.

"During the war," Sir Basil said, "we entertained 300,000 American troops in Northern Ireland and I made myself personally responsible to see that the American boys felt at home. Nor did I care about their sympathies on the partition question.

"If I were going stumping around the United States to gain sympathy for Northern Ireland I'd deserve what I got (from Mayor O'Dwyer) . . . But we don't take these things very seriously in Northern Ireland."

Asked if he expected to meet President Truman while in Washington, Sir Basil replied: "I certainly hope so." He will be there Wednesday, the guest of Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador. He is scheduled to be in New York from April 11 to 18.

O'Dwyer commented on Sir Basil's visit while reviewing the St. Patrick's Day parade in New York. He said that the banning of a similar parade in Northern Ireland was the "only bad note today." Then referring to Sir Basil, he said: "He is coming here in a month, and he will be one official who will not be welcomed at City Hall. And if he is, it will be because I am dead."

Survivor's Story

Steinhardt Had No Time To Bail Out

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
M/SERGT. GWYNNE A. LONG
Survived plane crash

Ottawa, Ontario, March 29 (AP). United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and four other Americans killed in a plane crash were ready to jump when the right wing blew off and fire blocked their chance of escape, the only survivor said today.

Master Sergt. Gwynne A. Long of Vannoy, N. C., told reporters crowded about his hospital bed that the crash yesterday came with numbing swiftness. Only 30 or 45 seconds elapsed from the time a tiny blaze first was noticed in the right engine until the tanks blew up, taking the engine with them, and turning the interior into an inferno.

"I figured we had 6 or 7 seconds," he said. "I went ahead and bailed out from 600 to 800 feet up."

The rest, he added, did not have a chance to jump. The group was on a trip to New York in the United States Embassy's plane, a C-47.

Asked if he thought sabotage might have caused the fire, Sergeant Long replied "I have no knewledge of sabotage . . . I hardly thing so."

Previously Sergeant Long had been quoted as saying the other passengers "got panicky and would not bail out," though he tried to push them.

"I have no recollection of that now," he told reporters.

He said he could recall no exchange of words as the plane plunged toward the snow-covered field, 11 miles from Ottawa, where it tore itself to shreds.

House ECA Vote Hits at Ireland Partition

funds for buying American farm products.

This one, also subject to reversal on a later roll-call, was by the narrow margin of 117 to 109, but it had the solid support of the farm bloc and may be hard to change.

The Irish vote was on an amendment by Representative John Edward Fogarty, 37-year-old Democrat of Harmony, R. I., who had tried in vain to put a similar amendment into last year's Marshall Plan bill.

Wrapped in Fancy Language

Fogarty wrapped his amendment into fancy language, making it withhold aid from any Marshall Plan country which spends money "in the maintenance or subsidization of any dependent country which naturally is, or should be, an integral part of some other participating country." The ban would apply "until such time as such participating country shall sever its control of, and refrain further from maintaining or subsidizing such dependent country."

"In plain language," Fogarty told the House, "this means the United Kingdom and Ireland." He explained that although southern Ireland was an independent republic, the six northern counties were still part of the United Kingdom.

Ireland as well as Britain is a "participating country" in the Marshall Plan.

Fogarty talked of the Irishmen who fought for American independence, and of the contribution the sons and daughters of Ireland had made in building the United States. He declared Britain "has had a stranglehold on the six northern counties since the first World War and spends approximately 150 million dollars a year to maintain this unfair hold."

He predicted that if Congress adopted his amendment Britain would act within 24 hours to let all the Irish people, north and south, vote on ending the partition.

"Should the British Government reverse its policy," he said with a smile, "the Senate can eliminate this amendment and nobody will be hurt."

Rooney Sees "Double Dealing"

The only two who spoke in support of the amendment were Representatives John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.) and Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.). Rooney has been presiding for weeks over an Appropriations Committee Subcommittee while officials pleaded for foreign aid funds.

He reminded the House of the hundreds of billions Britain had received each year in the Marshall Plan, and accused the British of "double dealing" in exchanging Marshall Plan goods for Russian wheat.

Rooney added that there was a "tremendous religious discrimination practiced in northern Ireland," where the Protestants are in the majority.

Klein, a leading Zionist champion, intends to submit another amendment today which would cut off Marshall Plan funds unless the British cut off arms shipments to the Arab nations.

The last speaker on the amendment was Chairman John Kee of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who quietly begged the House to reject it. He said it was not "germane" to the purpose of the foreign aid bill, although he said he would gladly support a resolution for ending Irish partition.

Shouts of "vote, vote," from the floor brought a standing vote which showed 94 to 55 for knocking the British out of the Marshall Plan. A teller vote changed the count to 99 to 66, and cheers rang out with the applause when the result was announced. Big-city Democrats appeared to outnumber the Republicans in the long line that filed up the center aisle to vote.

Fogarty, a veteran of five Congresses, an Elk, an Eagle and a Knight of Columbus, looked astonished and overjoyed at the outcome. But the few leaders on the floor were shocked. Chairman Kee at once moved for an adjournment, so that the Democratic leadership could get the House under control and repair the damage quickly.

Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) snapped that the vote "will be glad news in Moscow." Other Democrats promised that the House would get rid of the Fogarty amendment today.

The House spent most of its day debating the farm bloc amendment proposed by Representative Omar Burleson (D., Tex.). This would compel the ECA to use at least a billion dollars of its funds for farm products in the United States.

Present ECA plans call for spending about one and a third billion for farm products, mostly in this country. But if the 250 million cut of Tuesday is sustained, it will leave less than this amount available for farm products. And as the amendment is worded, it means that if ECA does not use the billion for farm products it cannot use it for any other purpose.

For all these reasons, the Administration is expected to fight bitterly against the Burleson plan. The test will come on a roll-call when the committee of the whole reports the bill, as amended, to the House.

Unless the House speeds up its work on amendments, the final vote on the huge foreign aid bill may not come until late Friday. At adjournment time last night the House had not yet tackled Far Eastern aid, or help for Arab refugees, or the first authorization for the so-called Point Four program of technical help to backward areas.

agreement with the British on trade with Red China.

As for the French, the State Department is not too happy over the limited autonomy Paris has granted to Emperor Bao Dai, of Viet Nam, and to the Kings of Laos and Cambodia, in Indo-China.

Ultimate Freedom Asked

While conceding that the three new states probably have been given all the independence they can handle for the moment, the State Department feels that the French should come out with a clear and unequivocal promise of ultimate freedom for the peoples of Indonesia. Only in this way can the Viet Namese be convinced that the new governments are truly nationalistic and that the rebel leader Ho Chi Minh represents enslavement to Soviet communism.

Secretary Acheson and his top advisers on the Far East, Ambassador at Large Philip C. Jessup; W. Walton Butterworth, Assistant Secretary of State, and Dean Rusk, newly designated Assistant Secretary for Far Eastern Affairs, gave the Foreign Relations Committee a generally pessimistic report on the situation in southeast Asia. Acheson, Jessup and Butterworth appeared in response to a request from the committee for a report on the recent Jessup-Butterworth mission to the Far East.

When the closed session ended, Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the committee, issued a meager statement which said only that Ambassador Jessup had "emphasized the vital importance to the United States of continuing and stepping up United States assistance to countries of this region where it can add to their determination and ability to resist Communist infiltration and to make further progress toward sound economies and firmly democratic governments."

Beyond that, Ambassador Jessup urged early Congressional apprpval urged early congressional approval gram and pointed out the necessity of having available a flexible fund for use in the general area of China and where need might develop, Senator Connally said.

Statement Is Disputed

One Senator who attended the meeting said that the Connally statement was inaccurate. He said that Point 4 hadn't even come up, and that discussion of this legislation had been put off until an open hearing today. Virtually the whole meeting, he said, was concerned with Dr. Jessup's narrative of his Far Eastern tour.

[Acheson and Jessup will testify at a public hearing on the Point Four program before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The hearing is scheduled for 10:30 this morning in the big Caucus Room of the Senate Office Building.

[It will be the Secretary's first public testimony since Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) announced a Republican drive to "get" him. Another witness with him will be Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for economic affairs.]

Jessup's mention of a "flexible" fund was in reference to legislation already pending. That legislation would keep available through June 1951, about 100 million dollars in economic assistance funds for the Far East appropriated last year but still unspent. In addition, 75 million dollars for arms aid in that area would be kept available for use at the discretion of President Truman.

In his summation of what the United States ought to do to stop communism in southeast Asia, Dr. Jessup put heavy emphasis on propaganda, one Senator said. Closer coordination of the information services of the United States with the propaganda facilities of southeast Asian countries has been urged as one means of more effective countering of Communist propaganda.

There was no mention of an over-all plan of military aid, but it was suggested that the United States should bolster the constabulary of several southeast Asian countries so they could deal with internal Communist threats.

Formosa in Asian Program

One Senator said that while Acheson still believes that no strength can be built around the defeated forces of Chiang Kai-shek, the State Department has not slammed the door on future aid to the Nationalists. He said the Secretary seemed more agreeable to the inclusion of Formosa in a broad Asian program. He said that Secretary Acheson and Dr. Jessup made it clear there was no prospect of American recognition of Communist China now or in the foreseeable future.

Meanwhile, Senator William F. Knowland, Republican, of California, proposed that the United States offer surplus food supplies to famine-ridden China if the Chinese Communists guaranteed fair distribution. In a letter to Secretary Acheson he suggested setting up a relief commission similar to that headed by Herbert Hoover after World War I.

Senate Passes Kerr Gas Bill Despite Price Rise Forecast

general debate ended by prior agreement at 4 p. m.

Senator Douglas promptly moved to send the bill back to committee. His motion failed, 45 to 37. That put Kerr bill supporters in the saddle, and never thereafter did they lose control of the measure.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), another leader of the bipartisan opposition then tried to limit the exemption to producers of less than two billion cubic feet of gas a year, or those whose gross sales do not exceed $250,000 annually.

Kefauver argued this would take more than 2500 "small producers" out from under Federal regulation but assure a check on the 37 largest producing companies which he charged are in a monopoly position.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who as Interstate Commerce chairman was in charge of the bill, took the floor against each opposition amendment in turn. He charged the Kefauver amendment would virtually halt the flow of gas to the big consuming areas. The amendment was defeated, 58 to 25.

For nine years after passage of the natural gas act of 1938 independent gas producers remained unregulated by the FPC, and they are still unregulated today.

In the Interstate Natural Gas Co. case in 1947, however, the Supreme Court rendered a decision construed by many to give the Federal Government jurisdiction under the act.

At that time a majority of the Federal Power Commission indicated they had no intention of using the power if they had it.

In reporting the Kerr bill, however, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee said there is now a "threat" the power will be used.

Connally, Douglas Clash

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and some of his colleagues from gas producing States urged the Senate not to give authority over the gas industry to "a little bureau—four or five bureaucrats."

Leading the opposition, Douglas argued that the commission has the power and should use it to curb the profits of the big gas producers.

"The Kerr bill would stuff them further until money runs out of their ears," Douglas said. "It would be gravy for the big boys and not the small independents."

Downey Gives Up Senate Race, Asks Support for Boddy

Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.), reversed earlier statements yesterday and announced he will not seek a third term in the Senate "upon the urgent advice of my physicians."

His withdrawal announcement, issued at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, urged his supporters and "all the voters of California" to back Manchester Boddy, publisher and editor of the Los Angeles Daily News for the seat Downey now holds.

Downey, who had announced on March 2 that he had decided to seek reelection after a period of indecision, said his doctors told him yesterday he has two peptic ulcers "which will require treatment for 60 days or longer . . ." He said that when the treatment is finished, he will be required "to lead a much less active life for a year."

His announcement threw the California senatorial race wide open, with three leading candidates in the field. Representatives Helen Gahagan Douglas, Democrat, and Richard M. Nixon, Republican, have filed to run in both the Democratic and Republican primaries; Boddy, who has backed Downey since his first Senate race, announced he also will file in both primaries.

County Disbursing Officer To Retire After 40 Years

The Washington Post

THIS MAKES IT OFFICIAL—John R. Lewis lifts the rubber stamp to mark his last document before retiring as disbursing officer in Montgomery County's division of revenue and disbursement. After 40 years' service, he retires today at the age of 70. Newest county employee Lewis leaves behind is Alexandra Weekes who wishes him farewell

When John R. Lewis, disbursing officer in Montgomery County's division of revenue and disbursement, first came to work for the county 40 years ago he was one of four governmental employes.

Tomorrow, when he leaves his desk to enter retirement at the age of 70 he will leave 550 fellow workers in county employ.

Lewis, who has watched the county offices expand from one room in the Old Court House to a network of county owned and rented structures in Rockville and other parts of the county, has made a life's work of public service.

"I was pretty young when I first came here," he said yesterday, "and this is just about the only job I ever had."

During his long service to the county he has held the posts of clerk to the commissioners, county treasurer, president of the board of commissioners and chief judge of the Orphan's Court in addition to his present position.

The council on Tuesday adopted a resolution praising Lewis' "long and faithful service," and Director of Finance Alexander K. Hancock paid him a simple but eloquent tribute by saying, "He'll be mighty hard to replace."

Lewis has no plans for his retirement except to keep on with his work as a director of the First National Bank of Mount Airy. He lives in Damascus, Md., with his wife, Bessie, and has one son and two grandchildren.

Chamber Group Calls Budget Cuts 'Weak'

The Council of State Chambers of Commerce yesterday accused the House Appropriations Committee of making a hasty and "pitifully weak" attempt at money-saving.

The council issued a scornful appraisal of the committee's proposed $1,380,000,000 reduction in the omnibus appropriation bill now pending in the House. This is about a 5 percent cut from what President Truman asked.

The council statement said that "abundant opportunities still remain for further substantial cuts" in the measure. It now calls for 29 million dollars in spending by 10 departments and a group of maajor independent agencies in fiscal 1951, starting July 1.

"The (House) committee applied a mild slap-on-the-wrist treatment to many agencies found engaged in wasteful and inefficient practices," said the report.

"The bill as a whole is unlikely to result in any substantial reduction in the Government's huge payroll of nearly two million civilians."

The council said that about 488 million dollars of the proposed cuts are "no real reductions at all." The statement said these are simply lower estimates than Mr. Truman made of the funds which will be needed to meet certain obligations such as pensions and highway grants.

If the committee is wrong and Mr. Truman right, the council said, more money will have to be appropriated later.

It applauded a 25 percent cut in Army engineers' civil works but said the Interior Department's Reclamation Bureau should take a bigger slash than the 7 percent cut proposed.

"Waste and inefficiency" were overlooked, the statement contended, in the State and Postoffice Departments, Atomic Energy Commission, Bureau of Internal Revenue, Bureau of Standards, Rural Electrification Administration, and other offices. The council added:

"The 337-page committee report itself is, for the most part, simply a catalogue of statistical vacuities and pious platitudes on the need to economize."

The State chambers commended the House committee for reducing by 10 percent the amount allowed for contract authorizations.

Anti-Red Bills Held Road to Police State

By The Associated Press

The Civil Rights Congress contended before a House committee yesterday that proposed anti-Communist legislation represents "a dangerous short-cut to thought control and a police state."

The Rev. Clarence Parker of Chicago, an Episcopal minister, spoke for the organization at a hearing by the House Un-American Activities Committee on pending anti-Communist measures.

Asked by Frank Tavenner, jr., committee counsel, whether he knew the Civil Rights Congress has been designated as subversive by the Attorney General and the committee, Parker replied:

"I am aware of that."

Parker said he regards a bill by Representative Nixon (R., Calif.), which the committee is considering, as unconstitutional. A similar bill, sponsored by Senators Mundt (R., S. Dak.) and Ferguson (R., Mich.) is pending in the Senate.

Under the bills, members of the Communist Party and organizations designated as Communist "fronts" would be required to register and account for their income. Parker said these registrations would constitute a "public blacklist."

"If this bill becomes a law, the consequences will be very serious for a large number of people," he said. "The membership of organizations listed as subversive runs into the millions."

Answering a question by Representative Kearney (R., N. Y.), Parker said he does not feel the listing of the Civil Rights Congress by the Attorney General "makes us subversive."

Cuts in Defense Go Too Far, Eisenhower Tells Senators

ment that the United States had disarmed beyond the point that he would advise.

Yesterday, he explained that one of the reasons for inserting this brief reference in a speech on disarmament was that only recently had he learned that the plane order money in the '51 budget would not keep the 48-group program equipped with modern planes.

Besides recommending additional air power funds, Eisenhower suggested we should "do more" in the fields of antisubmarine warfare, Alaskan defenses, industrial mobilization and intelligence.

Priority for 3 Purposes

The latter two need little or no additional funds, he said, while he would "give equal priority" to strengthening the Air Force, anti-sub. activity and Alaskan bases.

Ike told the Senators it is "essential" to provide" adequate means of combatting the "submarine menace." He said he learned recently that the funds in the budget for the purpose are not sufficient.

"I would accept without question Admiral (Forrest) Sherman's analysis on that," he testified, and added that the Senators could likewise depend on the Chief of Naval Operations' view.

It has been a "clear mistake" not to provide a "reasonable force of men with necessary quarters" to protect our Alaskan airfields, Ike stated.

The danger to such bases is by airborne, not sea attack, he said, and a relatively small force only is needed for their defense. A reinforced regiment, with modern weapons can do the job, the general added.

Refuses to Give Details

Eisenhower would not go into detail on what should be done about strengthening our intelligence and industrial mobilization. He did say that he would not change the "setup" of our intelligence forces, but refused to go further in open session.

As to mobilization of industry, he said he had discussed the matter with Elder Statesman Bernard M. Baruch, who has been critical of the Administration's failure to go further in this field.

Eisenhower said he did not urge additional funds for building a radar screen, as he felt recent steps taken along this line were sufficient.

Effect of Russian Discovery

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) suggested that the Russian development of an atomic bomb last September—ahead of our expectations—might have changed our defense needs. Ike said it might affect them "some" but "not as radically as you might think at first blush."

"You should never be more scared of the enemy than he is of you," he added.

The general highly praised the heads of the armed forces, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, and Admiral Sherman, and said the country could trust them not "to go to sleep" on this score.

Ike spoke off-the-cuff in a tiny Senate conference room. The meeting was originally scheduled to be closed but thrown open at the last moment. Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said he understood President Truman had asked that this be done.

When reporters suggested the hearing be moved to a larger chamber, Chairman Kenneth D. McKellar (D., Tenn.), demurred that it was "no Eisenhower-for-President rally."

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee said after the session that members of his group are planning amendments to the Omnibus Appropriations bill to meet some of Eisenhower's suggestions, particularly additional plane money.

But Chairman George Mahon (D., Tex.), of the House military appropriations subcommittee, declared we should "try to get along" with a 13 billion dollar budget.

Senator Thomas, chairman of Senate military funds group, said there would "have to be adjustments" of the budget in light of Eisenhower's statement. He said some additional budget estimates for Alaskan bases "are on the way."

Ike steered clear of such Senatorial questioning whether deficit spending and the unbalanced budget is undermining the national economy.

'Political' Issues

"To my mind such issues unfortunately have gotten a political character," he replied. "A man comments on them and suddenly he is a politician. I am not, sir."

But he repeatedly warned against harming the national economy by spending too much on defense. We are "not talking in terms of imminence of war," said the General, but of a long range program of keeping reasonably strong. Foreign aid, economic and military, should be continued, for they ultimately "will lighten the load" on us in the cold war, he added.

"I think the Russians are too logical and too sensible to start a war at this time," Ike stated. "And I can't see in the near future anything that can lead them to it—short of a desperate situation on the border or internally putting them on the spot."

Council Appeals Nonpartisan Vote Barrier

The Montgomery County Council has appealed the recent ruling of the Circuit Court barring nonpartisan council elections in the country.

Also participating in the appeal to the State Court of Appeals is Col. Norman B. Ames, Charter Committee president, who filed the original suit.

The council's appeal contends, according to County Attorney David Macdonald, that the court's ruling was "contrary to the law."

The court held that the county had no authority to enact legislation requiring council elections to be held on a nonpartisan basis. Its opinion inferred that the Statewide Lindsay Law providing partisan elections is valid.

New Quarters In Chest Unit

The offices of the Montgomery County Community Chest and Council will move to new quarters today at 811 Pershing dr., Silver Spring, Louis L. Orgera, executive director, announced yesterday.

The offices have been located at 8119 Georgia ave., Silver Spring. The mail address remains the same, Box 7, Silver Spring.

Orgera also announced that the County Health Fund, a Red Feather agency, will hold office hours at the new offices Tuesdays from 1:30 to 5 p. m.

McCarthy Charges Arouse Ire of Congress

O'Hara (D., Ill.) and Young (D., Ohio) teed off on Senator McCarthy and other Republicans who have been firing criticism at Secretary Acheson on a concerted drive to bring about his resignation.

McCarthy a "Headline Hunter"

O'Hara told the House the American people have confidence in Acheson and "resent the vicious thinking of petty politicians" who have been attacking him.

Young denounced Senator McCarthy as a "headline hunter" and asserted that the Wisconsin legislator has been unable to substantiate his charges of pro-communism.

But Representative Davis (R., Wis.) retorted that the people in this country "stand squarely behind Senator McCarthy in his effort to learn the facts and put them before the American people."

Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D.-Lib., N. Y.) became involved in angry exchanges when he arose to answer a speech made the previous day by Representative Keefe (R., Wis.). Keefe had attacked Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, one of the men accused by McCarthy as having an "unusual affinity for Communist causes."

Roosevelt said the charge, based on his association with the Institute of Pacific Relations, was an unfair application of the doctrine of guilt by association.

Representative Judd (D., Minn.) retorted that the institute, though it had distinguished names on its board, could nevertheless be a front organization.

He said many eminent people, including "relatives" of Roosevelt, had come to the defense of a man found guilty of "spying . . . I mean, perjury."

The reference was to Alger Hiss, whom Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt had defended in her column from time to time.

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Malone (R., Nev.) prepared a speech for Senate delivery accusing Democratic members of the Tydings committee of trying to "browbeat" McCarthy and "coddle" defense witnesses.

"I, for one, have heard enough and read enough about the cases presented for study by Senator McCarthy to cause me to join in the demand for a thorough investigation—not a whitewash," Malone said.

The Nevada Senator charged Democratic members of the committee gave "kid-glove treatment" to Miss Dorthy Kenyon, cited by McCarthy as a longtime Communist sympathizer, when she testified in angry denial of McCarthy's charges.

Malone said that although the Senate specifically directed the five-man Tydings committee to probe alleged Red influences in the State Department, the Democrats "appear more interested in coddling and protecting persons whose connections give rise to serious doubts about their loyalty."

Malone also noted recent testimony by Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy that the State Department has fired 91 employes as homosexuals.

"A great deal of the trouble we are in, internationally," he said, "can be laid to the tolerance of that kind of weakness in a service which should be above reproach."

Then Malone demanded:

"Did homosexuals, bribed or bullied, help plan the ECA (Marshall Plan) program? Did homosexuals decide that America must accept a greater volume of imports from abroad, even at the cost or injury to her own industry and unemployment to her own workingmen?"

Fluorescent Lights For Roads Studied

Fluorescent lights have found "great acceptance" in Europe and some South American countries to illuminate roadways and will catch on here, too, a lighting expert declared yesterday.

Speaking to the American Public Power Association, E. B. Karns, Westinghouse Electric Corp. street lighting expert, declared experiments in fluorescents were being carried on here. He said several characteristics made them "ideal for street lighting."

Karns said for the present, modern road lighting "will employ a gaseous discharge lamp," mainly a mercury vapor lamp of the 21,000 lumen size.

Another speaker at the association's three-day convention at the Shoreham was A. G. Gabriel, consulting actuary of Detroit. Gabriel said that "all public employes are entitled to retirement coverage" either by social security or a local retirement system, but could not hope for both.

Proposed amendments to the Social Security Act would permit States and Territories, other than the District, to enter into an agreement with the Federal Security Administrator to extend social security coverage, Gabriel said.

Says Mother of 12

Energy Lost In Homes by Inefficiency

As simple an error of design as placing the oven at the bottom of the kitchen stove rather than at the top has cost the American housewife "tremendous energy," Dr. Lillian G. Gilbreth said here yesterday.

Dr. Gilbreth

The mother in the best-selling book, "Cheaper by the Dozen," Mrs. Gilbreth has combined housekeeping and child-raising with a career as a pioneer consultant engineer in efficiency. Nine academic degrees—five of them doctorates—were sandwiched in between.

In Washington last night to speak before the Washington chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management, Mrs. Gilbreth said in an interview that there's tremendous inefficiency in the home "if no one studies and corrects procedure."

Mrs. Gilbreth said she got into the field of time and efficiency studies by being a psychologist who married a consultant engineer in efficiency, the late Dr. Frank Gilbreth.

The application of management efficiency factors to business and organizations, Mrs. Gilbreth said, begins at top levels and goes down. By theory, the employe as well as the boss benefits.

Foxes Go on Rampage

Vienna, March 29 (U.P.).—The Austrian Ministry of Agriculture has begun a campaign to exterminate several hundred foxes which have gone berserk, apparently from starvation, in the Soviet Zone and are attacking human beings, it announced today.

DAR Leader Hits World Government

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—The president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution voiced opposition to "world government" proposals today and commended education in United States citizenship and history as a powerful weapon against communism.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne addressed the forty-fifth annual conference of the Maryland DAR society, which passed a resolution against any United States or State legislative proposals "advocating the loss of our national sovereignty through world government."

The DAR leader approved the decision to work on an H-bomb, declaring that "any doubt" over that policy was "removed" by the "expose of communistic spies who have boldly carried on operations in our very midst."

Among resolutions adopted by the conference also was one opposing socialized medicine and one approving the Hoover Commission report on Government streamlining.

Mrs. O'Byrne was guest of honor at the two-day conference which opened this morning. Presiding at the convention was Mrs. George W. S. Musgrave of Laurel, Md.

Mrs. Thomas Stevens George of Towson, State chairman of the building fund committee, reported that Maryland society raised $8882 for the national building fund, $7433 of that in 1950.

Jelleff is vice president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association and a prominent civic leader. Serving with him will be Howard Mitchell, Dr. Harold Spivacke, Howard Hanson, William Schuman, Dorothy Manor, George R. Titus, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, E. R. Finkenstaedt and Milton W. Bridges Defense Ends In 79th Day of Trial

San Francisco, March 29 (U.P.)—The defense completed its case in the Harry Bridges perjury-conspiracy trial today when Attorney James Martin MacInnis ended nine days of closing arguments on behalf of the CIO Longshore Union chief and two co-defendants.

MacInnis ended his plea in the seventy-ninth day of trial. Prosecutor F. Joseph Donohue promised to make a short rebuttal argument, then Federal Judge George B. Harris will instruct the jury.

The case probably will be given to the jury of the eight men and four women Friday noon.

Krazy Kids

Hang your heads in shame as you read the front page with its banner headline of the House vote denying any further aid to Britain as long as Ireland remains partitioned. The vote was 99 to 66, showing that only a minor part of the House was in session, and this is what should be noted by our European Allies. In addition, everybody knows that any representative assembly has its off moments, and while we don't know the occasion of this particular spree, it was certainly an ebullition of high and irresponsible spirits. The House would be lost to all sense of elementary duty if such a decision were allowed to stand. It is our guess that the morning after will find this outrageous and schoolboyish exhibition repudiated by the membership. Hamacting en-masse is, however, an unedifying spectacle.

Mr. Churchill's Plea

It used to be the grumble of the back benchers that Mr. Churchill was too irregular in his attendance in the House to be an effective leader of the opposition. Evidently his habits have changed in the new Parliament. He is speaking regularly, and to good purpose, for Mr. Churchill is always capable of inspiring those who are looking ahead. What he said on Germany in his address Monday, for instance, will be a fillip across the Channel. There had been a somewhat chilly reception in France of the Adenauer suggestion of a closer union with France, on the ground, apparently, that there could not be any progress in this direction without British participation. It is a British initiative that Mr. Churchill now bespeaks. He feels that Mr. Bevin should take the lead among the European nations in raising Germany to "equal rank and lasting association" with them, including a share in the defense of western Europe. Mr. Churchill in turn got a chilly reply from the government, including a charge that he was being irresponsible.

To be sure, the arming of Western Germany is a hot potato which the politicians dropped as soon as it was served up by some of the defense chiefs of the Atlantic Alliance. We ourselves opposed the proposition in the form in which it was put out, namely, as the arming of Germany as such. But this is altogether different from the entry of the Germans into equal association with Frenchmen, Belgians, Italians, British and the rest in a European family, and the assumption by the Germans of equal responsibility for defense. This is what, we gather, Mr. Churchill meant, and if this is irresponsible, then we are equally so. There is no alternative policy to this kind of integration within the context of the world policy of the free world to get agreement with Moscow by increasing the area of strength.

Communist Strength

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is reported to have told a subcommittee of the Senate that Communist Russia has a fifth column in this country consisting of considerably more than a half million persons. This is a staggering figure, and it is not to be wondered that the Senators were appalled by it, as most of them apparently were. Five hundred and forty thousand Communists is not of course a very large number in relation to the total population. It would mean, according to current estimates, little more than 1 person out of every 300, or something under four tenths of 1 percent of the whole. But considering the monolithic discipline of the Communist Party, its capacity for acting as an integrated unit in docile obedience to orders from outside, the danger is not to be minimized.

The estimate includes not only outright party members, whether open or cryptic, but also fellow travelers. A fellow traveler, as far as definition is possible, is a person who, without joining the party or accepting its discipline, nevertheless follows the party line in most matters. The name seems to imply that while the ultimate goal or end he is seeking may be different from that of the Communists, the path to his goal, whatever it may be, seems to him to coincide with the immediate purposes of the party. In some instances, perhaps, fellow traveling may be a matter of expediency, as when, for example, a journalist or politician or a labor leader may decide that the favor or support of the Communists is to his personal interest. Thus many persons who are now very vigorously and even violently opposing Communists were not very long ago under the imputation of being fellow travelers.

It is no great secret that there has been a tremendous defection of American fellow travelers in recent years. What we have to determine is whether those who even now continue their collaboration, and are thus presumably included in Mr. Hoover's estimate, should be considered potential members of a fifth column in case of war. Mr. Hoover puts the number of open, or, as he calls them, "card-carrying" Communists, at 54,000. Assuming (according to the well-known simile of the iceberg) that the cryptic or "illegal" party is twice as numerous as the open party, that would make 172,000 Communists in all, leaving 372,000 as fellow travelers.

Private Eye

This is the great day—the day when Senator McCarthy will rise in the Senate and give his private dossier on Owen Lattimore to the neophyte compiler of dossiers, J. Edgar Hoover. The FBI will have a wonderful opportunity, if it is alert and attentive, to learn some of the fine points about detection from that prince among private eyes, the Senator himself.

Will Senator McCarthy permit his dossier on Mr. Lattimore to be examined by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee? Who can say? The Senator may be unwilling to have his investigative techniques disclosed. Some of them, we gather, are novel and altogether original. He may not wish to endanger the lives of his confidential informants. Some of them, perhaps, actually have lives. He may be reluctant to expose the names of innocent persons included in the file as a result of the exhaustiveness of the investigation. This, however, must be regarded as improbable since no persons seem innocent to Mr. McCarthy.

Will the Senate subcommittee issue a subpena for Mr. McCarthy's private dossier if he declines to make it available? We cannot think it would be so reckless. It has, of course, issued subpenas for confidential files to the Secretary of State, the Attorney General and the chairman of the Civil Service Commission. It would be going pretty far, however, to issue a subpena to a member of the United States Senate.

No, no, this dossier had better be kept a secret between the experts—Mr. Hoover on the one hand, with his plodding old-fashioned methods of checking facts and assembling all the relevant data, and Mr. McCarthy on the other hand, with his more modern, streamlined system of making the charges first and then gathering some other charges to prove the first collection. Mr. Hoover has a lot to learn if he is to match the Senator's high standard of a Red under every bed before Christmas.

Bond Prices

Prices of long-term Government bonds have been declining under the pressure of open market sales of bonds by the Federal Reserve System. There is good reason to believe that the chief purpose of these "bearing" market operations is to prepare the way for long-term Treasury financing. The Treasury will have to borrow about five or six billion dollars this year, and it is rumored that a considerable part of this new money is to be raised by selling bonds to nonbank investors. Federal Reserve officials are known to favor this type of financing, because it does not result in an inflationary expansion of the total money supply as do sales of Government securities to commercial banks.

No long-term bond issues other than savings bonds have been offered to the general public since 1945, and meantime some bonds have been retired. With no new issues coming on the market, a sustained investment demand based on a large volume of savings led to a pronounced rise in long-term bond prices and a consequent decline in yields after the Federal Reserve System discontinued the sale of bonds last June. With new Treasury offerings in prospect it was virtually certain that bond prices would eventually decline from the high levels reached in 1949. Apparently the resumption of open-market sales of bonds in November was intended to bring about an immediate adjustment of bond prices and avert the danger of later sharp declines after new Treasury securities appeared on the market.

By lowering bond prices now the stage is set for the appearance of these new issues on terms that should insure investment support. Furthermore, as the National City Bank points out in the March issue of its Monthly Letter, open market sales of long-term bonds by the Federal Reserve Banks have had the salutary effect of holding in check "a new boom psychology" in the bond market, akin to that which prevailed immediately after the war when investors were seized with fears that there might be a shortage of Government bonds. "One great danger in such a psychology," the bank says, "is that Government bonds may reach levels that will discourage their purchase and holding by stable investors and encourage a speculative following."

In addition to preparing the way for new issues of Government securities by a downward adjustment of bond prices to more reasonable and attractive levels, the bond-selling policy has had a slightly depressing effect on corporate bond prices that will probably increase the cost of borrowing new money, although there is no evidence to support the claim that the policy is designedly deflationary. However, by putting pressure on the bond market now the Federal Reserve System will be in a better position to lower money rates later on in case of a business downturn.

One thing is certain: the drop in Government bond prices has not been due to any loss of confidence in the Government's credit standing. The decline has been brought about by market operations, and when bond prices have reached the desired low level, the Federal Reserve authorities can be relied on to take steps to halt further declines and stabilize the market in preparation for new Treasury financing.

Land Of Famine

The Peking government is finding the going in China as hard as any of its predecessors. China is a Malthusian country—meaning by that term that its population is always ahead of its means of subsistence, and one of its usual "checks," famine, is now gripping the provinces between the Yangtze and the Yellow Rivers. Other provinces affected include those south of the Yangtze, particularly Hunan, Kiangsi, and Kwangtung.

What is new in a country which is traditionally known as Land of Famine is the silting up of Shanghai, once the world's third port. This is due to the neglect of the daily dredging which serves to keep the port open to the world's shipping. Shanghai is situated on a feeder of the Yangtze estuary called the Whangpu, which is little more than a tidal channel, penetrating some 40 miles into the interior, where it helps to drain off the waters accruing from a complicated network of interior lakes. A few centuries ago this river barely existed, and much of the countryside north and east of Shanghai is the growth of the last 300 years, being the deposit of the silt brought down by the Yangtze River on its tumultuous career from the mountain ranges of central Asia.

It might be thought that the new regime would have enough on its hands in attending to the ravages of war and of famine. But this does not necessarily follow. The new regime would not be deterred from further adventures by conditions such as are reported, for an emergency of some sort or other is always present in China.

Whispering Voice

Thirty-four million dollars is all the United States may be allowed to spend on its whole foreign information and education program during fiscal 1951. This, seemingly, is all that can be mustered for defense in the realm of ideas at a time when the country is laying out some 13 billion dollars for the military aspects of its defense. Thirty-four million against 13 billion! This dismal contrast comes as the Kremlin is increasing its propaganda efforts in critical areas, both in radio broadcasts and in pamphlets. Nor is this all. Perhaps the most formidable opponents of the United States, propaganda-wise, are the Communist Parties which receive untold support from Moscow. Indeed, practically every major country is spending proportionately more on its information program than the United States; impoverished Britain, for example, before devaluation was spending the equivalent of 27 million dollars for information services alone.

In cutting the foreign information appropriation from 36½ million dollars to 34 million dollars, the House Appropriations Committee stipulated that none of the cut should come out of Voice of America broadcasts. Yet these broadcasts are only a part of the program, and, as respects such areas as southeast Asia, perhaps not the most important part. Movies, libraries, personal contacts are essential there as means of reaching the people directly. To be sure, maximum expansion cannot come immediately, and perhaps not a great deal more money could be spent wisely at this time. But what is needed is a new and bold concept along the lines suggested by Senator Benton, a recognition of our tremendous stake in the battle for men's minds and plans to enlarge our operations accordingly. Surely the richest Nation in the world can do better than the present piddling effort.

No Dull Moments

Well, just as Senator McCarthy's little circus was getting a bit tiresome, and most of the customers had begun to look around for the exits, Senator Johnson has set up another act in an adjoining ring. Mr. McCarthy, as you know, is alarmed about the Reds in the State Department who have been handing away the world to the Kremlin; Mr. Johnson is alarmed about the moral character of the people who have been influencing the youth of America through the medium of the movies. In particular Mr. Johnson is worked up over the case of Signor Roberto Rossellini and Miss Ingrid Bergman and their plot to "tear a sweet little American schoolgirl from her devoted father." The reference—and the Senator expands upon it vitriolically—apparently is to the impending litigation over the custody of Miss Bergman's daughter by her lawful husband.

Considering the very bad name that Washington has been getting of late, it is of some melancholy comfort to know that some of the iniquity of the world has been going on elsewhere—in Rome and Hollywood for example. What evidence, if any, Senator Johnson may have to support the whirling charges he has been making, we cannot say. But we doubt very much that it would add up to a good reason for a bill to place all actors and actresses under some form of Federal license, which is what Senator Johnson is aiming at.

As we have said before, the private character or conduct of the actors has little or nothing to do with the objective merits of a movie. And if, as Senator Johnson implies, the box office is the principal criterion applied by the industry, then the moviegoers must bear a share of the responsibility for the character of current films. The same applies to the notoriety given to the Bergman-Rossellini affair. If the scandal had not been so widely relished, far less publicity would have been given to it. If the movies are in need of reformation, the best and surest way to go about it would be to reform ourselves.

"Harold J. Laski"

Your March 27 editorial on my friend the late Harold Laski is, I think, misleading and unjust in more than one particular. As a teacher Harold Laski was most brilliantly effective, but certainly not in the sense of creating or attempting to create an orthodox school. Some of his pupils may have turned out Communists, some turned out stout conservatives. Not only did Harold Laski at the London School of Economics not attempt to impose a doctrine, but in his choice of colleagues he was astonishingly free from ideological bias. This I can testify to, having been one of them myself.

Laski, as a professor, ought to be separated from Laski as the politician. No doubt he himself sometimes justified the confusion, but not nearly as often as the general public was led to think. Secondly, it may be true that in America he appealed mainly to the intellectuals. But in England he was an extremely effective and indefatigable speaker at all types of meetings and to all levels of socjety.

He was, of course, a devoted member of the Labor Party and was extremely popular with the rank and file. It was this popularity, won by his incredible generosity of effort, time, and money that led to his being elected, for one year only, in the due course of seniority, as chairman of the Labor Party. As it happened, his turn came in 1945, the year of the great Labor triumph. This led, both in America and England, to an exaggeration of his position in the Labor Party.

There was no question of trying "to ease him out of the chairmanship." He went out of office automatically as he had come into it automatically. I shared very few of Harold Laski's views. But I am sure that the vast range of people who knew him would regret very much his being regarded as a narrow and intolerant doctrinaire concerned mainly with manipulating politics from behind the scenes.

DENIS W. BROGAN,
Professor of Political Science, Cambridge University, England.

Editor's Note: The statement that Professor Laski was "eased out of the chairmanship," was, as Mr. Brogan says, erroneous. It was based on a misleading implication in a news dispatch published just before Professor Laski was retired from the chairmanship. We regret the error.

Cooperative Housing

The consequence of removing the cooperative housing section from the housing bill was epitomized in a one-sentence paragraph in your reporter's story of the action of the House of Representatives. The article said (March 22): "As finally approved the bill consisted mainly of financial assistance to the private building industry."

Why the Government should help the private building industry to build housing that most people can't afford, and should at the same time refuse to give similar help to people who want to form cooperatives to build the housing they want and need, is rather difficult to understand—except in terms of the power of the real estate lobby.

When the Government made funds available to cooperatives and private utilities through the Rural Electrification Administration, co-ops brought electricity to hundreds of thousands of farms that the private power industry had ignored for years. The best answer to the problem of providing moderate cost homes for those who cannot afford the luxury apartments or the palatial estates or the stereotyped cracker boxes that the private building industry is now creating, is the cooperative approach.

The Danes have done it, the Swedes have done it, and we can and sooner or later will do it. Labor, veteran and church groups have recognized the desperate need for middle income housing, and the place cooperatives can play in meeting that need.

Keats Misquoted

The writer of the March 23 editorial "Edgar Rice Burroughs" should check his quotations before they get into print, and so avoid rewriting Keats. The only thing I can say for him is that he remembered to spell it "faery".

Social Integration

During the war I attended a special service school in Army administration in which the policy of integrating Negroes and whites was in effect. As nearly as I can remember, the result of this policy corresponded with that described by Mr. Kenworthy in his recent survey of Air Force integration. However, it was minimized when discussed among whites by such statements as, "Well, these colored boys (at school) are high types," etc. It is a great pleasure to read Mr. Kenworthy's report which, in effect, explodes these deprecations.

What a reflection this report is on civilian social policy in Biloxi, but even more pointedly, here in Washington. Those who oppose social integration of Negro and white on the grounds that it will create or precipitate strife, are thoroughly refuted by what actually happens wherever integration is effected in a positive, forthright manner. No strife occurred in Government cafeterias, at the Dupont Theater, at the new Gayety, etc.

Is it possible that instead of creating the conditions for strife, this policy of social integration relieves a great majority of whites of a terrible sense of guilt?

Congress And Executive Papers

President Truman's disinclination to open up the complete loyalty files for the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee is not without precedent.

Washington was the first President to refuse to accede to a congressional demand for information. The House of Representatives wanted him to turn over to it papers relative to the Jay Treaty. Washington refused to give up the papers on the grounds that their nature did not permit disclosure at that time. Apparently the House was satisfied with this explanation, for it went ahead and passed the appropriation for the treaty.

The House of Representatives asked Monroe to turn over to it documents pertaining to the conduct of certain Navy officers and other American officials in South America. He based his refusal on the contention that it would be a violation of the rights of the individuals concerned.

Of all the demands for information made upon the President by a House of Congress, the one made by the Senate upon Jackson in 1833 was perhaps the boldest. "Old Hickory" was busily engaged in his fight against the Bank of the United States at the time, and during the course of one of his Cabinet meetings he read a paper attacking the bank. Subsequently, the Senate passed a resolution asking him to transmit to it a copy of the paper. Jackson stated that he did not feel that he was accountable to the Senate for any communications he made with his department heads and that he was forced to refuse its request in order to protect the rights of the executive branch of the Government.

Later Jackson was confronted with another request from Congress, this time from the House. The House had passed a resolution aimed at investigating the executive departments. Jackson said that he would be willing to facilitate the investigation of any specific charges, but that the request as presented was an invasion of the rights of the executive department and that he would resist it.

Tyler refused to give the House of Representatives a list of names it wanted. He castigated the House for making the demand and called its action unconstitutional. Later, he again refused a request from this same body, this time for information regarding Indian frauds. In this instance he based his refusal on the contention that the President had full authority to determine what information was to be promulgated.

Polk turned down a request from the House for information regarding the Northeastern boundary dispute on the ground that the resultant publicity would be harmful to the country. Grant, too, found it necessary to refuse Congress certain information. The House of Representatives had asked him to tell it whether the acts or duties of any executive officer had been performed at a distance further from the seat of the Government than provided for by law. Grant responded by stating that Congress had no constitutional power to require the President to give an account of the manner in which he discharged the duties of his office.

Cleveland replied along much the same line as Grant when the Senate demanded that all the department heads turn over to it the documents they had pertaining to the conduct of officials suspended by Cleveland shortly after he took office. Though the Tenure of Office Act which required the approval of the Senate for the removal of officials was still in effect, Cleveland contended that the President had sole power to remove officials and that he was not required to explain his official conduct to the Senate unless he had been impeached by the House of Representatives.

President Hoover was confronted with much the same type of request from the Senate that Washington had received from the House. The Senate had refused to act on the London Naval Treaty which he had negotiated. Hoover called a special session after the Senate adjourned. Before acting on the treaty the Senate wanted the President to turn over to it all papers in his possession regarding the treaty. Hoover refused to do this on the grounds that it would impair all future American negotiations.

It is obvious from the foregoing that there is a well-established precedent giving the President the right to decide what information should be given to Congress upon request.

Lopsided Ship Of State

By Malvina Lindsay

One-Sex Crew

"WHAT SHALL I write these German women?" asked the leader in an international affairs discussion. "They want to know why more American women don't run for political office, especially for Congress."

"That's easy," spoke up a colleague. "Tell them it costs from $5000 to $10,000 to finance a campaign. Women here don't have that kind of money."

"But—do we want to broadcast that? And is it the whole story?"

"Women don't run because they can't get elected," spoke up another participant. "Look at the British. More women ran for Parliament than ever before in the last election—124. And only 20 elected! Yet think what Britain owes its women."

"And it was the women's vote that gave the Conservatives their big showing," chimed in someone else. "I heard Lord Woolton say so on the radio."

"Every party, every candidate always is elected by the women's vote" acidly remarked a political veteran.

"Then women just won't vote for women" concluded a newcomer.

"Women candidates always get the hard districts, the hard fights," contributed a feminist.

"Women don't know their own political strength," said the first speaker. "But the men know it all right."

WHAT TO tell the German women went unanswered. Will the 1950 campaign throw any new light on the query?

Some prophets (masculine gender) think the recent loss by British women of three seats in the House of Commons is sign of a trend. Women are going back to their "sphere" everywhere, say these "dopesters." Even in Russia! And note all this talk in the United States about the feminine role.

But if woman has a special sphere or role, say those concerned about her political apathy, all the more reason for having her in government to balance things. It's a two-sex society that government directs.

However it looks as if international apologies for this country's small representation in public life will continue for some time. The Senate may get another woman member for the Eighty-second Congress—conceivably two. There might be a small pickup of women representatives. But no spectacular results are in sight.

In fact none is predicted for the next decade by Dr. Louise M. Young, author of the recently published Understanding Politics: A Practical Guide For Women. Dr. Young thinks that Margaret Chase Smith will "have company" in the Senate, but the number of women in the House will remain fairly constant, possibly increase a little. For social change is slow, she points out.

But feminine representation in State Legislatures which was 29 in 1917, 217 in 1949, is likely to show faster gain, she thinks. It is now twice as high as in Congress — percentage - wise. Though it has sunk from a wartime peak of 234 in 1945, the long-term trend is "certainly upward."

BUT EVEN if the political crystal glass of 1950 doesn't hold anything exciting for women, there's still 1952. Women seem to do best running for office in presidential years. Also in years when times are good.

Like a true scientist, Dr. Young calls these "tentative theories." But the relatively poor showing women candidates make in off-year elections suggests, she says, that many women candidates rely for support on independent voters who turn out in greatest number in presidential election years.

Their decline in success during economic depression also suggests to Dr. Young "that there is an actual drying up of political interest on the part of women in troubled times," also that resistance to their candidacies by slatemakers is heightened when social tides are running against them.

As to most of the theories as to why women aren't going places politically, Dr. Young says "nonsense." Women are still infants in the political world, she points out, and lack the experience and technical know-how men possess.

Nevertheless, she thinks, feminine political ineffectiveness is a great social waste. So do many others, including I. A. R. Wylie, who has warned American women of what the "unbalanced masculine element did in Germany and Japan." And Geoffrey Gorer, British critic, surveying American women, warned them there were "far too many political virgins for the continued prosperity and well-being of a democracy."

Income Tax Errors

The Rennies' article "Income Tax Due for An Overhaul" published in your March 19 issue contains several errors. For example: "At $16,000 you get into the 50 percent bracket. After $50,000 the Government will take three quarters." If the taxpayer is married his $16,000 will be calculated on the basis of two $8000 incomes. The authors do not mention this provision. If a single person paid the correct tax on $60,000 taxable income for 1949, he paid $6520 (not $7500) for the $10,000 income over $50,000. The amount paid in two years by the man with a taxable income of $4000 a year is $1438.40 (not $1680.)

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Bridges And The Master Spy

SENATOR Bridges telephoned me on Tuesday morning to say that I had done him an injustice when, in discussing the campaign which began with the Formosa affair and went on to the McCarthy business, I included him among the unreconstructed and irreconcilable isolationists.

Lippmann

He is quite right in saying that his own record is not isolationist. I wish I had remembered it and had described him, as I did Senator Knowland and Senator Smith of New Jersey, as one who, though not intending to be isolationist, is conducting a campaign which has paralyzed American foreign policy in the Far East and will, if it goes on, separate us from all our allies and partners in Asia and leave us isolated and without influence.

THE FEARFUL quarrel now raging in Washington is the aftermath of the tremendous diplomatic defeat which we have suffered in China. The heart of the Republican attack is the belief, in itself quite legitimate, that after such a humiliating and costly disaster there must be an accounting. But Senator Bridges and his colleagues do not feel the need for an impartial historical inquest. They already know the answer. In the view of Senator Bridges the accounting must show that we have been betrayed, that there must have been a "master spy" who has controlled the American Government for the past seven or eight years, and has contrived to destroy Chiang Kai-shek and arrange the triumph of Mao Tse-tung.

Senator Bridges does not know who that master spy is. Nor has he one shred of proof that there is or ever was such a master spy. He has, moreover, enough sense to know that the master spy could not have been Mr. Owen Lattimore. But he cannot imagine how we could have suffered such a disaster if some supreme villain had not pulled the strings.

This leads him to assert that General Marshall and Secretary Acheson have been the dupes and puppets of a ring of conspirators whom they have harbored in the Department of State. He thinks that these conspirators, who have been directed by the master spy, prevented this Government from helping Chiang enough to enable him to defeat the Communists.

THOUGH it is always difficult to prove the negative, in this case there is proof. It is in the Wedemeyer mission of 1947 and Secretary Marshall's decision to reject the Wedemeyer proposals for American intervention in China. That is the crucial point in the story. Anyone, I believe, who will take the trouble to study these documents will see the real choice which has confronted the American Government in China.

THE ESSENCE of the Wedemeyer report was that Chiang's government could not be saved by sending him more money and more arms: "the reactionary leadership, repression, and corruption" of the Kuomintang, said General Wedemeyer, "have caused a loss of popular faith in the government." General Wedemeyer, though he credited Chiang with personal sincerity, did not believe that "he has today sufficient determination...." for "overruling the political and military cliques surrounding him."

Therefore, General Wedemeyer recommended not merely money and arms but a full scale American intervention in the Chinese civil war. He proposed to have American military and civil advisers take control of Chiang's government, purge it, reform it, and then manage the Chinese economy and direct the Chinese armies while this Government underwrote the Nationalist regime. General Wedemeyer had such a poor opinion of Chiang's government and of his chances of success that he proposed to intervene and establish an American protectorate in China.

THIS WAS an honest measure of what would have to be done if Chiang was to be saved. It was the estimate not of a Communist, a fellow-traveler, a master spy, but of General Wedemeyer who really wanted to save Chiang, but knew, as Senator Bridges and his friends did not, what it would take to save Chiang.

The man who decided not to save Chiang at this price was none other than George Marshall. He had spent a year in China studying the prospects of Chiang. He knew, as General Wedemeyer did, what it would take to save Chiang. As Secretary of State he decided that the cost of saving Chiang was exorbitant and the risks of trying to save him incalculable.

It is preposterous to claim that this—the crucial decision—was the work of a master spy. It was the decision of George Marshall, and it was explained to the House Foreign Affairs Committee in executive session on February 20, 1948. The gist of the Marshall decision to reject the Wedemeyer plan of intervention was that such an attempt to underwrite the Chinese economy and the Chinese government's military effort "represents a burden on the United States' economy and a military responsibility which I cannot recommend as a course of action for this Government."

IF SENATOR Bridges is to sustain his charge, he will have to show (1) that the Wedemeyer estimate of what it would take to save Chiang was fraudulently exaggerated by "the master spy," and (2) that General Marshall's decision not to commit this Government to such an undertaking was dictated by "the master spy."

That will take some proving.

McCarthy's Helpers

By Marquis Childs

Need For Republican Leadership

SENATOR VANDENBERG'S letter appealing for a renewal of the bipartisan policy was a reminder of what has been missing throughout this session of Congress. In the absence of the leadership supplied in the past by the Senator from Michigan, the bipartisan foreign policy has been virtually abandoned.

Childs

That is the fact, and there is little reason to believe that the letter will restore it. In this are the elements of both personal and public tragedy.

As leader of his party on foreign policy in the Congress, Vandenberg exercised a restraining influence on the die-hard Senators who wanted to restore the old isolationism. He did this through his constant day-to-day relationships on and off the floor of the Senate. Part of his influence was in his prestige, his seniority.

During most of this session Vandenberg's serious illness has kept him away from the Senate. His wife also is very ill. The prospect of his return to active leadership in the immediate future is at best uncertain.

THIS would seem to insure that the dominant voice on both foreign and domestic policy will be sounded by Senators Taft, Wherry and Bridges. Taft has publicly declared that he encouraged Senator McCarthy to continue, in the conviction that if McCarthy missed one target he might hit another. Wherry and Bridges are openly leading the "get Acheson" drive.

The opposition to this triumvirate within their party has been timid and tentative. Small wonder, too! They control the party machinery and they have shown themselves to be ruthless. Wherry and Bridges, taking their cue from McCarthy, do not bother to argue issues. They merely harangue and denounce.

The fateful election of 1920 suggests a parallel. In that year 31 distinguished Republicans signed a statement affirming their belief in the League of Nations and the necessity for international cooperation. They were men of stature and integrity, including such leaders as Henry W. Taft, brother of William Howard Taft; Elihu Root, Herbert Hoover and Henry L. Stimson.

Other noisier Republicans were saying exactly the opposite. Warren Harding did a vague straddle. The Republicans were swept into power and America returned immediately to the "normalcy" of isolation.

WHAT an opportunity exists today for an active Republican leader to try to carry on what Vandenberg so successfully initiated! Such a leader—let's say Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts or Harold Stassen—could express his true convictions about a bipartisan foreign policy and the imminent peril in quarreling over the direction of American aims beyond America's shores.

I believe the response within the Republican Party to such leadership would be impressive and immediate. And such a leader would have little to lose. His silence and his timidity at this point will not gain him the favor of the men who intend to keep the controls of the party. There is little doubt as to what the response would be among independent voters. In the quaint phrase of the socialism of another era, the timid and the tentative in the GOP who really believe in a bipartisan foreign policy have nothing to lose but their chains.

The function of such a leader, and those who would at once rally around him, would be twofold. He would demand an end of irresponsibility in his own party. And he would call on the Truman Administration for a constructive and active approach to try to resolve the great unresolved issues between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The latter function is fully as important as the first. The outline of a program looking to eventual negotiation with the Russians which can be the only basis for peace, simply is not visible.

It is possible, of course, that the Taft-Wherry-Bridges "get Acheson" tactics may win an election, or help to win it. It might even win in '52. But this time such a victory wouldn't be worth very many years of peace. That is the world tragedy transcending the fate of any individual.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

Improved and Unimproved

The United States has the greatest natural system of harbors, inland and coastal rivers, intracoastal waterways and tidal estuaries in the world, and five of the world's largest lakes. All are splendidly adapted to improvement and interconnection as continuous waterways. Of the some 65,000 miles of navigable waters, only 28,000 miles have been improved, with much of that mileage still having inadequate depths and widths. With a coastline (Great Lakes included) of more than 30,000 miles, there are less than 200 improved harbors, many yet with insufficient area and depth. Former President Theodore Roosevelt once said, "A channel is no deeper than its shallowest reach, and to improve it short of the point of effective navigability is a sheer waste of all costs." High cost distribution is a heavy burden on the people. More low cost water transportation can do much to lighten it. New and expanding industries seek sites where water transportation is available. Economy in the administration of government is vital, but it should not be accomplished through drastic cuts in expenditures for purposes which are helpful to the general welfare and add to national strength and wealth.

Farm Enumerators To Be in Clover

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

How's your lespedeza?

If you're a city dude you can blamed well keep your lespedezzing to yourself.

But if you're a man of the soil—out with it!

"How much lespedeza seed was harvested, is one of several questions farmers will be asked starting Saturday about lespedeza alone.

Lespedeza, of course, is a clover named after D. Lespedez, Spanish governor of Florida.

Saturday is E—for Enumeration—Day for the 1950 census, the biggest lespedeza and other counting in the Republic's history.

There'll be practice runs Thursday and Friday.

To Be Asked More

Farmers will be asked about 334 questions more than the rest of us.

Yesterday rural enumerators gathered in counties around Washington getting the word from instructors about getting the answers from the men of the soil.

Many of the 26 Montgomery County farm enumerators who assembled in Rockville Firehouse have farm backgrounds. Such as Mrs. Laura G. Waters, of Germantown, Md., who has lived 55 of her 63 years on one.

But some had never been on a farm. With these there was much brow-furrowing over lespedeza and other words in the census.

Eager for Course

Nonetheless the city hands were looking forward to an intensive short course in farming the two weeks of the census.

"I think we're going to really learn about life on a farm," said Mrs. Kenneth Barncord, of Gaithersburg, Md. "Before I became a census enumerator I had no idea what the yield per acre for anything was . . ."

The 334 questions are indeed a varied array. As:

How many cowpeas were hogged or grazed, or cut for silage?

How many cows and heifers were milked yesterday?

How many sows and gilts have farrowed since December 1, last year?

Gilt was another of those words that stumped the city bred.

(A gilt, as we thought everyone knew, is an immature female hog; also a young sow that has not been bred long enough to show signs of pregnancy.)

Well, sir, it will be springtime in the meadows and no time nicer, city man talking, for plugging across a ploughed field and asking a few dozen questions of a farmer.

Farmer? What's a farmer?

Why a farmer, as everyone knows (and the Census Bureau says) is a person with three or more beehives, or has a greenhouse, or has 150 chickens, or sold 350 dozen eggs last year . . .

Her Husband's Death Probed

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

STUNNED WIFE—Mrs. Wesley C. Thompson, with her two children, Wesley, 6, and Denise, 4, are shown at their home, 4902 1st st., Temple Hills, Md., as Navy started an investigation into the mysterious death of her husband that day. Weekend watches run 12 hours, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. and the reverse.

"He usually came home shortly after finishing his watch," she said. But about 1 a. m. Saturday she became concerned and called the non-commissioned officer on duty at the barracks.

He knew nothing of Thompson's whereabouts, she said. It was not until 6 a. m. Sunday that she had learned, by telegram from Captain Karl A. Thieme, that her husband had died. Thieme is commandant of the Naval Receiving Station, which has administrative jurisdiction over Quarters K, barracks for about 1400 Navy Department employes.

Thompson had made a telephone call from the office shortly "to someone in another barracks" before his death, authorities said. He was found by a temporary resident of the barracks who has since gone on leave, it was reported.

Mrs. Thompson said news of her husband's "very sudden" death came as a shock to her, because he had been in good health.

She was told by a Navy medical officer that Thompson died, apparently from a cerebral hemorrhage, the wife said.

Joined Navy at 18

Thompson was 18 when he joined the Navy in Chester, La., where he was born. He met Mrs. Thompson, the former Fannie Esther Rollins, at her home in Weedonville, Va., before World War II.

They were married in Boston on December 1, 1941, after which Thompson was ordered to Pacific duty aboard the destroyer Morris. He saw action for 10 months, including such battles as the Coral Sea and Midway, before returning to this country.

H was promoted from chief gunner's mate to chief warrant officer during the war, his wife said.

Thompson instructed in gunnery at the Chief Gunner's Mate School here for two years after October, 1942, she said. Since then he had been assigned to duty in Orange, Tex., and returned to Washington in 1947.

The Thompsons' two children are Denise, 4, and Wesley C., jr., 6.

The chief is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Thompson, of Kelly, La.; five brothers, Jessie Thompson, Patterson, N. J., Lester D. Thompson, Wilmington, Del., A. D. Thompson, Monroe, La., A. W. Thompson, Kelly, La., and Leslie B. Thompson, who lives on the West Coast; and three sisters, all of Monroe, La.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Man Jailed 1 Year

Benjamin Lewis Thompson, 45, who gave his address as 623 Pennsylvania ave. nw., was sentenced to a year in jail by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson on a charge of stealing six shirts from Murphy's, 1214 G st. nw.

Truman Favors 3 Hours Off on Good Friday

In a letter from Key West, President Truman yesterday supported the work of the Committee for Three Hours Observance of Good Friday.

The committee, composed of Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy and laymen, has asked Government agencies and business firms to permit employes time off to attend three-hour religious services on Good Friday, April 7.

Mr. Truman expressed the hope that on Easter Day "all nations and all peoples will turn away from divisions and disunion to seek unity in the love of God and the love of man."

Officials of the committee, he said, are "leading a movement out of which, I trust, with God's blessing, wil come greater zeal in every undertaking whose purpose is to defend the everlasting reality of Christian revelation."

In cooperation with the committee, 40 movie theaters will flash notices on their screens beginning today, urging patrons to attend religious services on Good Friday.

The Rev. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, is chairman of the committee. Co-chairmen are the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop; the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Roman Catholic archbishop, and Methodist Bishop Charles W. Flint.

Councilman's Son Runs Into Treasurer's Auto

The 7-year-old son of a Falls Church councilman was slightly injured yesterday when he ran his bicycle into the car of Falls Church Treasurer James Ferguson, in the 1200 block of Seaton lane.

The youngster, Lee M. Rhoads, jr., of 407 Rosemary lane, was released after treatment for a head cut at Arlington Hospital.

2 Rockville Cherry Trees To Aid Fete

The two most valuable trees in the Nation at the moment have turned up in a Rockville, Md., nursery.

They are a pair of Japanese cherry trees believed to be the only ones hereabouts now in bloom.

With the certainty that the Tidal Basin trees will not be out for the Cherry Blossom Festival Saturday and Sunday, the two trees yesterday acquired the value of so much gold.

There was half-serious talk about mounting guards over them.

At any rate they were getting royal care at their home at A. Gude Sons nurseries in Rockville.

Plans are to use their boughs at the princesses reception Friday night at the Shoreham Hotel and possibly at the pageant itself.

The two trees are Yoshinos and descendants of some of the earliest if not the earliest Japanese cherry trees brought to this country, Gilber Gude said.

Their botanical forbears came over in 1903, some years before the Tidal Basin trees, he related, and were planted in the yard of Mrs. E. A. Merritt, who lives at 9312 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase.

The trees were "forced" into bloom for the festival. They've been blossoming about a week and will last over the Festival, Gude said.

Ramey Guilty In Slaying wife and children at 744 6th st. se., where the slaying occurred.

Ramey repeatedly protested that he loved his wife dearly, that the slaying was an accident. He characterized his act as that of a "wise guy," and said he wielded the weapon only to raise a "racket."

In final argument, Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin said the death was caused by a "vicious use of a deadly weapon." He pointed out that Ramey could have used the butt end of the gun if he wanted merely to pound on the bathroom floor.

Defense Attorney Louis Jongbloet hammered at the jury that it was "death by misadventure," an accident which the defendant did not intend.

"Only he and God know what was in his heart," Jongbloet said. "But you may have gathered that he is not the brightest boy in the world. It was a stupid thing to do, but I say it was in character."

Throughout the final session of the three-day trial, Ramey sat with his head bowed. He had shaved off his dapper mustache and the elongated sideburns that he wore when he was arrested.

His children in court the day before were held by a relative for a time waiting in the corridor for the jury to return.

The jury left its deliberation once during the afternoon for additional instructions.

They wanted to know whether they must append the words "voluntary" or "involuntary" should Ramey be found guilty only of the lesser offense of manslaughter.

Judge Morris informed them that manslaughter, without either descriptive adjective, was all that was required in this case.

Also, they asked the judge to explain the words "malice aforethought," which is necessary for a verdict of second-degree murder.

The jurist told them that either a feeling akin to hatred was necessary, or else a "wanton or reckless" disregard for the safety of his wife. Judge Morris said that no premeditation was needed for a conviction. It was enough, he said, that the act be malicious or wanton in its nature.

The defendant need not have intended the fatal consequences of his act, Judge Morris said, to be convicted of the second-degree murder charge which can carry up to life imprisonment.

Under the judge's instruction, they were told to find Ramey guilty of manslaughter should it be determined that the negligence, though criminal, was less than that necessary to be shown for second-degree murder.

SHOWN TO COMMISSIONERS—William Turner, president of the Chillum Civic Association, presented these two charts to Prince Georges County commissioners at a zoning hearing at Upper Marlboro. They chart school enrollment increase and low cost housing construction and showing direct relationship between the two factors. and health education are being promoted.

The underlying theme of General Young's slum housing analysis is, namely: vigorous enforcement of health, sanitation and building regulations now on the books will go a long way toward bringing thousands of salvageable dwellings up to decent habitable standards—without delay, without great expense and without new controversial legislation.

But by the same token, he is understood to emphasize that his rehabilitation program, as outlined, has a limited-end objective; that comprehensive redevelopment of slums is "a most worthy end," but quite a different subject.

"It will not be a solution of the slum problem," he has written, "but it will be a very real amelioration of the problem, and well worth doing in itself while awaiting comprehensive redevelopment."

Study Being Made

General Young's report is now being studied by Commissioner John Russell Young. It is an outgrowth of studies and recommendations made last year by the Joint Committee on the Baltimore Plan which included representatives of the Washington Real Estate Board, Washington Housing Association, Board of Trade, Federation of Citizens' Association, Washington Building Congress and the Washington Home Builders Association.

Among the long-range proposals which General Young has urged as good are a formal housing code "insofar as it is attainable" and the possibility of assigning a single District judge to all Condemnation Board cases.

General Young lays particular emphasis also to the basic problem of how to act legally against overcrowding in slum dwellings. He suggests careful legal study of new legislation that would bar overcrowding in any new structure or building converted to new residential use after passage of the act.

U. S. Soon Could Bomb 48 Cities of Enemies

Anchorage, Alaska, March 29 (AP).—An Air Force officer said here yesterday that in the event of an attack on the United States "our Air Force could bomb 48 of the major cities of our opponents within three days after the first shot is fired."

Lieut. Col. Charles Heffner, director of plans and operations of the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Wing, made the estimate in a talk to the Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Lewis to Speak

Dr. Gertrude Lewis, of the Federal Office of Education, will discuss "Building Security Within Our Children" at the meeting of the Montgomery County Branch of the Association of Childhood Education International tonight.

The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock in the Forest Grove School, Forest Glen rd., near Sligo Creek pkwy., Silver Spring.

142 D. C. Democrats Give Party $70,805

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Exactly 142 District Democrats last year contributed a total of $70,805 to the coffers of the Democratic National Committee while local Republicans could scrape up only eight contributors who gave $3263.37.

One of the eight GOP contributors was Edgar Morris, Washington businessman who served last year as co-chairman of President Truman's inaugural ball. Morris gave the Republicans $250.

A check of the 1949 financial reports on politcal contributions reported to the Clerk of the House, as required by law, showed that 25 Democrats put up $1000 or more compared to only one GOP donation. The check was made by Congressional Quarterly News Features service.

The big Democratic contributors included several persons registered as lobbyists.

In the lower $100-to-$1000 bracket of givers were included Secretary of State Acheson ($100), Attorney General McGrath ($200), former Attorney General and now Supreme Court Justice Clark ($200) and four Senators as well as many lesser figures in the Truman administration.

Defense Secretary Johnson contributed $300 to the National Truman-Barkley Club here.

CAA to Abandon Midway for Wake As Plane Stopover

Midway Island is being abandoned as a stopover for planes flying the Pacific.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration announced yesterday it is closing out its facilities there for civilian aircraft, effective May 1.

Its action followed the Navy's decision to withdraw from the island, 1310 miles west of Honolulu.

The Navy had supplied runway maintenance, search and rescue crews, and lights, water and other community facilities for the island.

The CAA estimated it would cost about $600,000 annually to keep up its operations without Navy assistance. An additional $695,000 would be needed, it said, to modify facilities to meet civilian needs.

Pan American Airways has been using Midway regularly as a stopover on flights from the United States to Japan. Other civilian planes also have used it infrequently.

These planes will now bypass Midway and land at Wake, which is about 2301 miles from Honolulu.

One on the Aisle—

An Ambassadorial Mission for BT

By Richard L. Coe

BALLET THEATER, Constitution Hall's distinguished visitor last night and tonight, has ahead of it the sort of year dreamed of when it started 10 years ago.

In mid-July, under auspices of ANTA and with the cooperation of the Cultural Division of the State Department, this American offspring of the oldest of the arts will begin a five-month tour throughout Europe.

Before that is over, Ballet Mistress Margaret Craske and Choreographer Antony Tudor will have started work with another Ballet Theater wing as resident ballet company for the Metropolitan Opera.

And next winter and spring will bring a full-scale national tour. As BT's president, Blevins Davis, says in his Constitution Hall program note, the company's appearance on that black-draped platform has its apologetic note. But, though tied-to-the-Potomac Washingtonians may not realize it, many cities across our country do boast stages that accommodate all the sets, lighting equipment and visual accoutrements that are vital to ballet.

This summer's tour—the company's first to Europe since a memorable eight weeks at Covent Garden in '46—will begin with performances before civilian and military personnel in Germany. Then "Theme and Variations" (on tonight's program here) will open the Edinburgh Festival, after which a three-week return to Covent Garden.

In Venice, BT appearances will be the closing event of the Venice Festival, with dates later scheduled for Rome, Naples, Paris, Belgium, Holland and Vienna.

The State Department's interest in this mirror of American culture is both natural and keen. Our diplomats know too well the one-faceted impression foreigners are likely to have of our land, and the skills of such as Nora Kaye, Nana Gollner, Igor Youskevitch, John Kriza, Hugh Laing and their fellows will do much to give an enviable slant on our cultural state.

The tour itself represents many months of planning by Blevins Davis, the Independence, Mo., gentleman farmer who last year saw the values of international theatrical exchange with his sponsorship of "Hamlet" at Elsinor and of the Howard University Players' Scandinavian tour.

A Permanent Home

As president of Ballet Theater, Davis also is reported to have made one more impressive gesture toward the Lucia Chase-Oliver Smith organization. The ranch he bought last fall near Colorado Springs is to become a permanent home for the group, thus guaranteeing that continuity which so often is lacking in all our dance and theatrical spheres.

Among the 60 who'll be making the European tour this summer are two Washington girls: Liane Plane, who received all of her training prior to joining the company from the Lisa Gardiner-Mary Day Washington School of the Ballet, and Jenny Workman, long a student of Marion Venable's studio.

To the dance, Ballet Theater thus adds another D—Diplomacy.

BARTER THEATER makes its final appearance this season at the Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, tonight at 8:30 when it will present Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock," using the new ending the playwright has written for the Porterfield company . . . Joan DeWeese, Herbert Nelson, Frederic Warriner, Elizabeth Wilson and Mell Turner have the leads . . . Seats at the Willard Hotel agency.

VOLKMAR WENTZEL, that National Geographic Magazine man about Nepal and Washington, will be showing the first pictures ever made in the remote land between India and Tibet tonight at 8:30 in a special showing of "Exploring in Nepal" for the American University art department . . . The picture will go on at 8:30 in the auditorium of Hurst Hall at the Nebraska ave. entrance to the campus.

BOX OFFICE MAN Percy Booth, whose phiz you used to see behind the ticket wicket of the National and now see in the same slot at the Gayety, is keeping busy with long lines of ticket-buyers for "A Streetcar Named Desire" . . . Don't let the lines discourage you, though; Monday night starts a three-week run and there are still seats to be had for the patient.

THE FAIRLINGTON Players tonight and tomorrow night present Moss Hart's comedy, "Light Up the Sky" . . . This is the one about the shifting moods of author, cast, producer, relatives and onlookers on the night of a play's tryout; William Chichester has directed a cast that includes Earl Weatherwax, Kyda Dennis, Zara Bishop, Barbara Vaughan, Carolyn Chichester, Deen Evans, Harry Cary, Edward McCrensky and Clason Taylor . . . Both performances will be played in the Arlington Farms recreation hall at 8:30 . . . Seats downtown at Brentano's.

ALSO TONIGHT: Roosevelt High School students present "H. M. S. Pinafore" in the school auditorium at 8:15; in the Gilbert and Sullivan classic, which will be repeated tomorrow night, are Dorothy Scates, Adele Goldstein, Allan Milofsky, George Smith, Arnold Sperling, Arthur Knopfmacher, Richard Holmes, Judy Levin and Dooley Stephanos . . . The Arts Club will present two one-act plays at an after dinner meeting, Percival Wilde's "What Never Dies" and the Neighborhood Players in George Mosel's "Jinxed." . . . The East-and-West Association will present a program on India at Pierce Hall, 8:30, with Howard University Players in Tagore's "Chitra," dances by Priyam Patel and Bhupendra Hazarika and "Scenes from Life in India" portrayed by Indian Women of Washington.

Genocide Talk Friday

George A. Finch, counselor for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, will discuss the Genocide convention Friday at 8:30 p.m., before the Baltic-Scandinavian Club in Friendship House, 619 D st. se.

TRIUMPH OVER TRAGEDY: Nana Gollner, a Texas lass who took to dancing to counteract the effects of polio, found dancing a royal road indeed. Now she's one of the stars of Ballet Theater, appearing again tonight in Constitution Hall

Bjoerling Returns as Opera Star In Constitution Hall Program

By Paul Hume

There are a few seats left for tonight's Ballet Theater at Constitution Hall. Try to get them.

The brilliant American company moved into the hall last night looking their finest. Their dancing, in ensemble and solo was polished, dazzling, and completely smooth.

Swan Lake, Act One, opened the evening. With Igor Youskevitch as the Prince and Nora Kaye as the Queen, there was little chance it would be less than superb. Actually, as again later in the Bluebird scene of Princess Aurora, they met the test brilliantly. Youskevitch has never surpassed the perfection of his agile grace in both works.

To this was added from both him and Kaye a dramatic note that warmed Swan Lake into something quite human; this is the kind of thing Kaye is noted for. Kaye's dancing lacked some of the flair for this classic role that she showed last year, but it is a beautiful conception.

The corps de ballet was excellent in all they did. They showed precision and balance that spoke of endless polishing up they have done.

In Fancy Free we saw ballets' tribute to the efficiency of the United States Navy. Jerry Robbins' choreography stands up with timeless quality that marks the piece as both classic and absolutely modern.

To single out John Kriza for his work in Fancy Free is to say he has the lion's role. He was mirrored in mood and quality by Paul Gladke and Eric Braun. Jacqueline Dodge and Norma Vance and Bumped with suggestive clarity as the two girls who started things rolling.

Princess Aurora, the sequence from Sleeping Beauty, brought Nana Gollner forward as the Princess, with Kriza in one of his first classic roles, as Prince Charming. Gollner's technique is fluent; she dances with the look of one approaching stardom. Kriza is not yet the thrilling Prince he should become, but he finds the mood and look of the part.

Erik Bruhn, a Danish visitor with the company this season, showed beautiful style and easy leaps.

We hope that out of last night's audience of Mrs. Truman, many ambassadors, ministers, and Cabinet members, someone will take steps toward breaking ground for a new, adequate theater and concert hall.

U. S. Bond Quota Set At $653,950,000

Boy Citizen Cited by Amvets

CECIL STOUTSENBERGER of 1424 Park rd. nw., yesterday received the Citizenship Trophy presented by the Columbia Heights Amvets Post to the boy chosen as the most outstanding member of Metropolitan Police Boys Club 10. Cecil received the cup from Harold Russell, armless veteran who commands the Amvets and who won the Motion Picture Academy Award for "Best Years of Our Lives"

The Treasury Department yesterday announced a national savings bond campaign goal of $653,950,000, with the District's quota of Series E Bonds, $7,500,000.

Announcement of the District's quota followed an address by Secretary Snyder at the Hotel Mayflower in which he described the savings bonds as "a strong unifying force in our national life."

The bond drive will run from May 15 to July 4. The campaign will be called the "Independence Drive," and the slogan used in it will be "Save For Your Independence: Buy U. S. Savings Bonds."

Standing with his back to a large-scale replica of the Liberty Bell, Snyder told the organizational rally that "the key factor in our present economic stability is public confidence.

"This widespread confidence rests in part upon the financial security provided by the record holdings of personal savings, of which Savings Bonds form a very important part," he said. "Public confidence also rests upon the Nation's immensely strong financial structure, and upon the general knowledge that people's incomes today are better protected than ever before."

Americans now hold close to 49 million dollars of Savings Bonds, Snyder said, "equivalent to the total value of all farm real estate in the country."

Leaders in Government, business and industry were among those present at the dinner, together with directors and volunteer campaign chairmen from the 48 States.

The dinner followed a day-long conference of the campaign workers at the hotel.

Commissioner System Lauded By Sothoron

Influential Prince Georges County Democrats last night heard State Senator L. Harold Sothoron laud the county commissioner system as "a magnificent form of government."

The Maryland Senate House majority leader's remarks were evidently aimed at groups who have been urging the charter system for the county.

Sothoron told over 200 members of the Democratic Caravan Club at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club that the county "doesn't believe in new fads," and that the old system is true, tried and trusted."

He was a headliner at the banquet honoring members of the county delegation. Others present were LeRoy Pumphrey, majority leader of the House; Perry O. Wilkinson, House speaker pro tem; and Delegate George G. McLeish. Unable to attend were: T. Raymond Burch, William H. McGrath and Dr. N. B. Steward.

Other speakers included Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) who said he was "proud of the progress the country has made under Democratic leadership"; T. Howard Duckett, attorney and banker; and Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland. The latter was introduced by toastmaster Charles E. Callow as "head of Prince Georges County largest industry."

School Board May Floodlight NW Park Area

A compromise yesterday ended a jurisdictional dispute that nearly wrecked a plan to floodlight the park area adjacent to Francis Junior High School, 24th and N st. nw., scene of several crimes recently.

A meeting of representatives of the Board of Education, the Recreation Department and the National Capital Parks Service concluded the school board will be asked to furnish the floodlights.

Congress Asked To Close Gaps in D. C. Tax Statutes

Washington's Commissioners yesterday asked Congress to close loopholes in the District statute on tax exempt property.

The Commissioners sent a proposed bill to the Capitol to modify the property exemption law of 1942. Their request was referred to the House District Committee.

Prince Georges Hearing Set In Zoning Row

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday were directed to show cause by April 10 why they should not be ordered to grant a rezoning petition to the Lightview Development Company.

Judge J. Dudley Digges in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro signed the order and set April 14 for a hearing.

Through Attorney Hervey G. Machen, the company contends the commissioners refused to grant semidetached zoning for approximately 30 acres known as the Carl A. Heider tract on Riggs rd. because of the opposition of nearby residents and not because of the evidence. The tract is across from another apartment development, the suit states.

Thailand's Boy King Cremated In Rites of Oriental Splendor

Bangkok, Thailand, March 29 (U.P.).—The boy king, Ananda Mahidol, who died four years ago of a mysterious pistol shot wound, was borne to his funeral pyre today in a golden chariot 40 feet high. It was drawn by 100 men in the uniform of ancient Thailand warriors.

The new king, 22-year-old Phumiphon Adundet, appeared from the royal palace to accompany the body of his older brother on the long walk past hundreds of thousands of their subjects.

Ananda Mahidol's body, curled in the foetal position, was inside a cone-shaped urn of gold, 5 feet tall and encrusted with precious gems.

To the thin wails of the flute, the long parade wound past the drawn up ranks of the royal army, navy, marine and air force corps to the cremation grounds. United States Ambassador Edwin F. Stanton, in black tails and top hat, led the foreign mourners, the Diplomatic Corps.

Purple-clad household servants carried the late King's most valuable possessions on small silk pillows as the procession crossed the temple city. Big guns boomed out at one-minute intervals.

Then came other silken-clad mourners, including the highest Buddhist priest of Thailand in a golden chariot supported on the shoulders of his devoted followers.

The morning sun glittered on the urn which rested high on the palanquin. At the towering pyre, built at a cost of $90,000, there was one concession to the West. A mechanical elevator lowered the urn from the chariot to a low golden float which circled the crematorium three times.

The King, the other members of the royal family and the Diplomatic Corps climbed the golden stairs inside the structure to pay their last respects. Then, again to the weird strains of the flute, the urn with Ananda's body was raised to the top of the pyre, 100 feet above the massed thousands.

Phumiphon Adundet lighted a symbolical fire assigning the body to his ancestors. The actual burning will take place later, in private. The big, gold, jewel-covered urn will be removed. The body will remain in the inner urn of sterling silver.

The temperature hovered at 100. Many fainted. Some had come from as far as 100 miles for the ceremony. Impatient throngs broke through the ropes and some were trampled upon, but hospitals reported no serious injuries.

Some, who had been accorded special positions along the route, slept in line to be sure of holding their places. Thailand's new, democratic attitude was reflected in the crowd's standing when the body passed by.

An old woman who had seen the cremation of King Rama VI, Ananda's uncle, said:

"This isn't like the old days. Then everyone sat down. Everyone saw the procession then, but it meant holding uncomfortable positions for hours."

Ananda, eight reigning King of the Chakri, died of a pistol shot wound through his forehead administered in his palace apartment.

His death touched off a series of charges that he was assassinated. Counter-charges that he committed suicide and explanations that his death was an accident.

The facts are still a mystery despite investigations, public hearings and court proceedings which are expected to continue even after the cremation.

C-47 Makes 2 Landings on North Polar Ice

Anchorage, Alaska, March 29 (AP).—A Tenth Rescue Squadron C-47 airplane has made two successful landings on the north polar ice pack, the Alaska Air Command announced last night.

The landings, made March 21 and 22 but unreported until now, were made 100 miles north of Barter Island, a desolate stretch of land off the northern coast of Alaska. The island serves as a base of training operations now being conducted by the Air Command.

The C-47 was piloted by Lieut. Col. Eugene O. Strause of Topeka, Kans. Col. Bernt Balchen, commanding officer of the Rescue Squadron, termed the landings "one of the most important events in polar aviation."

"Colonel Strause's landings showed that if necessary both large bombers and transports could crash land with comparative safety on the polar ice pack," Balchen said.

The landings were designed to test the different types of surfaces available in the far northern region.

One was made on a large ice block covered with course granulated snow; the other on hard-packed and drifted snow, the usual surface found in the region.

On both days, the C-47 was preceded onto the ice by a glider piloted by Lieut. James S. Keel of Chicago. It later was snatched up by a C-54 and towed back to Barter Island.

The crew of the C-47 remained on the ice approximately 35 minutes the first day and about 90 minutes the next. Neither day, however, were crew members able to take soundings of the water depth because of the 10-12-foot thickness of ice.

Group Named To Solve USES Sidewalk Row

A special committee has been formed and a program adopted to cure sidewalk troubles in front of the combined District Unemployment Compensation Board claims office and U. S. Employment Service industrial and trades hiring office at 505 K st. nw.

The committee includes Gerhard van Arkel, counsel of the Senate District Committee, as chairman; Capt. Albert B. Clark, head of the second police precinct, and representatives of the employment service, labor groups, businessmen in the area, and Negro groups.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Charles Stofberg, aide to District Commissioner John Russell Young; J. George Stewart, clerk to the Republican membership of the Senate District Committee, were among those who cooperated in the conference that produced the committee. The meeting was held Tuesday afternoon

It grew out of police arrests of persons outside the K st. hiring office. Several groups two weeks ago complained to Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) that a policeman had dressed in civilian clothes and borrowed a truck to arrest 11 persons on charges of incommoding the sidewalk. The arrest on February 24 was the first "masquerade" arrest police said they had made in the drive, based on USES requests for police aid in breaking up knots of loiterers around the K st. office. USES officials said women had been subjected to unpleasant remarks, and that trucks arriving to pick up construction workers had been boarded by men who had not been processed by the office.

The program developed in the conference includes these points:

1. An effort will be made to get toilets installed in the K st. building—lack of them has turned the adjoining alleys into outdoor toilets, it was said.

2. Persons seeking work would be allowed to stay in the building from 8 a. m. until noon, instead of the present hours of 8 a. m. to 10 a. m.

3. An attempt will be made to get contractors to pick up prospective employes at the USES desk instead of driving trucks up to the door and loading up from the sidewalk.

Scarborough Shelled, Nats Lose to Tigers, 9 to 3

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

LAKELAND, FLA., March 29.—You could call Manager Red Rolfe a contented Tiger at this point. His shortstop problem with the weak-armed Johnny Lipon on the job is still a minor irritation to Rolfe, but other matters have been working out nicely.

The slender Rolfe was battling to keep his Tigers in the race last season and it was something of a task for the worryingest manager in the league. The declining batting figures of his infielders could have been mistaken for Rolfe's weight, which went into even more sharp a dive.

POVICH

But it's a different Rolfe who is taking the 1950 Tigers into the pennant race. He's smiling again, his weight is up, things ain't so grim with him, and he likes the whole idea that his club is the dark horse of the field. He doesn't say so, but he's willing to believe that, like they say, the Tigers could take it all.

The Tigers finished 10 games behind the pennant-winning Yanks, and Rolfe sees how they can take up that slack this season. "We lost 8 or 10 games around second base," he says. "Gerry Priddy ought to make a 10-game difference."

ROLFE HAD A TIME of it last winter talking Walter Briggs and Billy Evans, the Detroit bosses, into paying $125,000 for Priddy. They were sore at the Browns for turning down a $200,000 offer for the same fellow the year before and vowed they wouldn't do any more business with 'em. But Rolfe got downright persuasive and got the man he wanted.

He wasn't abashed at all when in the first couple of weeks of spring training, Priddy was the biggest bust in Florida, failing to get a hit in the Tigers' first four games. "If I didn't know what kind of a ball player he is, I'd give him the bum's rush out of camp," Rolfe said. "But he'll come around."

A week ago, Priddy started to come around. He began making the kind of plays that set Rolfe to drooling at the prospect of that kind of a guy at second base for his ball club. And then he started hitting. Over one stretch he connected safely six times out of seven. The Detroit pitchers, victim of many an infield misplay last season, are in a mood to embrace Priddy.

BUT ROLFE IS TAKING even more satisfaction out of another of his winter deals. That one was with the Yankees in which the Tigers obtained first baseman Dick Kryhoski for Dick Wakefield, the outfielder who was the problem child of Detroit managers but no problem at all to the league's pitchers. Wakefield hit .209 last season.

The Yankees gave up on Kryhoski as a first baseman too quickly, Rolfe believed when he swung the deal. Rolfe makes allowances for Kryhoski's lack of fancy play around the bag, but he's risking that against the big bat Kryhoski is apt to bring to the Tigers. And thus far, the evidence has all been in favor of Kryhoski and Rolfe.

Especially has it been evident when the Tigers have been playing the Yankees in the Grapefruit League. A week or so ago, Big Richard single-handed licked the Yankees with a ninth-inning triple at St. Petersburg. The other day, he beat 'em again with a bases-full double and a pair of singles.

IF THE TIGERS ARE INDEED the dark horse and it's the Yankees they have to beat, then the pennant may well be decided by the Kryhoski-Wakefield deal the two clubs swung last winter. Kryhoski might lift the Tigers up there, and the Yanks may blow the pennant for the lack of a first baseman.

Not that the Yankees don't own a competent first-sacker in Tommy Henrich, but when they move him into the infield they're sacrificing the best right fielder in the league. And the Yanks are shy on good outfielders. Casey Stengel gambled that Wakefield would awaken but thus far there is no evidence that he is a solid Yankee.

In fact, observers in the Yankee camp report that Wakefield hasn't changed much except his uniform. He's still too fat, too heedless of the serious business of playing baseball, and too inured to easy treatment by the front office. Rolfe feels that he didn't give up much in Wakefield, who should have been a great ballplayer but never worked very hard at it.

Yanks Snap 5-Game Loss Streak, Beat Bosox, 5 to 4

Sarasota, Fla., March 29 (AP).—The New York Yankees snapped their five-game losing streak in the Grapefruit Belt today by turning back the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 4, to square the exhibition series at two games apiece.

After Lou Stringer had tied the score at 3-all with a home run in the seventh, the Bombers forged ahead again with a two-run rally off Joe Dobson in the eighth. A single with the bases full by Joe Collins drove in both tallies.

The World Champions staved off a determined rally by the Red Sox in the same inning, Bob Porterfield checking Boston with the bases full after Ted Williams' third single of the day had driven in one run.

A's Beat Dodgers In 10th on Lucky Hit

Vero Beach, Fla., March 29 (AP).—A bad hop single by Sam Chapman gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 10-inning, 9-8 triumph over the Brooklyn Dodgers today.

There were two out and Elmer Valo on second base via a walk and a steal when Chapman hit the ball. The Dodgers had tied the score at 8-all after two out in the ninth, when Bobby Morgan hit a home run in the left centerfield bushes with Duke Snider on base.

Lou Brissie, going the last seven innings and allowing 10 hits, was the winner, with young Billy Loes, Brooklyn's bonus righthander, who pitched the ninth and tenth, the loser. Carl Furillo hit a two-run homer off Brissie in the fifth.

Phil Sluggers Rout Cards

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies gave another impressive exhibition of power today as they again crushed the St. Louis Cards, 10 to 2.

The Phils got mid-season hurling from Curt Simmons and Blix Donnelly while three Redbird hurlers were raked for 15 base knocks, including five doubles and two triples.

All the Cards' eight hits came off Simmons, who worked for six innings. Howard Pollet limited the slug-happy Phils to two hits in his three-inning chore. Eddie Sawyer's outfit has pounded out 46 hits good for 86 bases in their last three games.

Bradenton, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Cincinnati's Reds clicked off their seventh successive preseason exhibition victory today by rallying to down the Boston Braves, 3-1.

Kent Peterson and Harry Perkowski yielded only three hits to the Tribe as the Reds ran their Grapefruit record to 12 triumphs in 16 games.

Easter Slams 5th Homer, Indians Win

Tucson, Ariz., March 29 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians bunched eight hits for six runs in three innings today to edge the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-6 in an exhibition baseball game.

The Tribe pounced on Pitcher Hal Gregg for four runs on four hits in the third inning. Luke Easter, king-sized Negro outfielder, lifted a 370-foot home run out of the park with one man on base. It was the big rookie's fifth homer of the season.

Charles Will Defend Title

Pittsburgh, March 29 (AP).—Jake Mintz, vociferous manager of NBA Heavyweight Champion Ezzard Charles, said today the Cincinnati Negro definitely will defend his title again in June.

"I'm only following the doctors' orders," said Mintz on his return from New York where Charles underwent physical examinations. "They said he could have fought tonight, but there was a chance he would crack that bum rib again and hurt himself for good.

"Naturally, I decided to protect my boy. The doctors said he'll be in first class shape in two months if he had a complete rest and allows that rib and the bruised heart muscle to heal."

Charles was scheduled for a championship go with Freddie Beshore, of Harrisburg, Pa., in Buffalo, N. Y., tonight. The bout was canceled when New York's Medical Advisory Board discovered that an earlier injury the dusky slugger suffered had not healed properly.

Mintz said, "I still have that commitment in Buffalo which I certainly will honor first. We have until June to get in under the wire on the six months defense limit. We'll make it."

Charles' last title bout was October 14 in San Francisco when he knocked out Pat Valentine.

Newhouser's Arm Trouble Puzzles Rolfe

Detroit, March 29 (AP).—Sports Editor Lyall Smith of the Detroit Free Press said today "there is something definitely wrong with Pitcher Hal Newhouser."

Smith's story brought to a head a week of rumors that the Detroit Tigers' ace lefthander is having trouble with his pitching arm.

Newhouser, generally rated as the highest paid pitcher in the major leagues, has pitched only two innings in spring training games.

He was scheduled to pitch batting practice before Tuesday's game with the Washington Senators but left the mound after throwing only a dozen balls. "My arm hurts," was his terse statement as he headed for the clubhouse.

Tiger Trainer Jack Homel said he has been unable to locate any muscular trouble in Newhouser's arm. "The muscles seem loose, but Hal says they hurt," he explained.

Newhouser's sole appearance in a spring training game was on March 12 at St. Petersburg when he pitched against the Yankees. He was due to go three innings, but left the mound after only two.

Since that time, Newhouser has pitched only a minimum of batting practice and never has been listed to work in an exhibition game.

Manager Red Rolfe parried all questions regarding Newhouser until Tuesday when Newhouser had to leave the pitching mound.

Then he said, "I haven't worried too much about it until now. Hal always is his own boss in the spring.

"He never has a weight problem and as a result we don't plan to use him much in exhibition games. I had planned to use him several times on the way north but now I don't know," Rolfe added.

The Tiger pilot said that if the arm does not come around in a few days, the club will have X-rays taken.

"I frankly don't know what to make of it now," Rolfe said candidly.

Harris Begs Griff For Pitching Help

Hudson's Injury Points Up Crisis

Lakeland, Fla., March 29.—The Washington club's pitching situatino is getting so grim, Manager Bucky Harris is confessing "it didn't look good to start with, now it looks worse."

The shoulder injury to Sid Hudson which threatens to remove that young man from Harris' pitching plans for several weeks, was merely the latest of a long series of pitching disappointments.

Ray Scarborough has not resembled a solid pitcher in any of his Grapefruit League starts. Joe Haynes hasn't yet been able to cut loose. Young Dick Weik is still afflicted by wildness, and there is no sign of a help from the rookie crop.

Mickey Harris, formerly tabbed as a relief man, has pitched better ball than any other of Harris' hurlers, and has been promoted to a starting job. Lloyd Hittle has shown little.

Young Dick Welteroth, of whom much has been expected, has shown no improvement. The Cuban rookie, Connie Marrero, is very much an uncertain quantity, lacking a hard ball, and Big Jim Pearce and such as Bill Dozier and Earl Davis and Diz Sutherland are being dismissed as too green.

Harris is so frantic to add pitching help that he is not content to wait upon such as the Red Sox and Yankees might cut loose at squad-cutting time a month after the season opens. He's beseeching Griffith to make some kind of a deal for pitching.

"He's hopeful that the Nats may yet land Dizzy Trout from the Tigers, and that subject apparently came up today when Griffith talked with Billy Evans. Harris is at the point where he might consent to give up one of his better ball players for more pitching.—SHIRLEY POVICH.

Groth's 5 Hits Pace Detroit Win

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Lakeland, Fla., March 29.—The Nats came to Lakeland today and were outhit by Johnny Groth. Consequently they took a large-sized beating from the Tigers, 9 to 3.

Groth personally banged out five hits, one more than the entire Washington cast could accumulate against the fireballing Virgil Trucks and Marlin Stuart, another right hander.

For eight innings, the Nats were specializing in three baggers and nothing else, and not enough of those. Going into the ninth, the Nats owned only three hits, all of them triples. Mickey Grasso doubled in the ninth to maintain the extra-base theme.

Groth Hits 500-Foot Triple

Ray Scarborough started the game for the Nats, pitched five innings, and was no success. The Tigers belted him for 11 of their 15 hits, three of which were triples, one a double. Scarborough, pitching himself into shape, was almost knocked out of shape.

Lloyd Hittle was the victim of the Tigers' last four hits and their final three runs in the eighth. George Kell, who had merely singled and doubled in the early inning, finally connected with an inside-the-park, two-run homer into right field in the eighth.

Groth, though, staged the top batting show. He opened up with a 500-foot triple to dead center with the help of a tail wind, and then tapered off with four successive singles to bat 1.000 for the day.

Coan Continues Hot Pace

Eddie Robinson was playing almost a lone hand against the Tigers in the hitting department. He made the Nats' first hit, a run-scoring triple to deep right in the first inning, and he made their third hit, another three-bagger to right in the eighth.

Gil Coan maintained his extra-base-hitting pace with a run-producing triple to right against Trucks that upped the Nats' lead to 2-0 in the second inning.

The Tigers immediately tied it at 2-2 when Groth and Kryhoski opened up against Scarborough with consecutive triples in the second inning. They made it 3-2 in the third after Gerry Priddy tripled to deep center. Two errors by Johnny Lipon gave the Nats a run in the fourth without a hit, but from that point they went into eclipse.

Joe Ginsberg opened the fourth with a two-bagger and the Tigers made it 4-3. In the fifth, Scarborough walked three, gave up singles to Wertz and Groth, and the Tigers made it 6-3.

In the eighth against Hittle they made it round figures, 9-3.

IN SHORT . . . Clark Griffith, who dislikes to gallivant around Florida with his team, made the trip to Lakeland today for a purpose. He tried to wheedle an infielder or a pitcher out of the Tigers in a huddle with Billy Evans. . . . With the Tigers needing a right-handed hitting outfielder, Evans might have listened with interest to a Clyde Volmer-for-Dizzy Trout deal. . . . The Nats' pitching situation is even more critical pending the condition of Sid Hudson. . . . Hudson was distraught yesterday by a sudden pain behind his pitching shoulder while working against Birmingham, but today he was a mite happier about it, with the pain slacking. . . . Tomorrow, he'll submit to X-rays. . . . Manager Bucky Harris hopes it is no recurrence of Hudson's trouble in 1947 when a spur growth handicapped him. . . . But there is a threat that Hudson's pitching career may be ending. . . . In the sore arm department, Paul Calvert warmed up for the Tigers today but begged off pitching because his flipper hurt. . . . Trucks was scheduled to work only five innings for the Tigers today, but pitched six in the hope of shedding some of his 210 pounds. . . . Lloyd Hittle gave up three runs and four hits to the Tigers in two innings, but only one ball was hit well, Kell's homer. . . .

Lee of D. C. Gloves Champ

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Norvel Lee, Howard University student, won the National Golden Gloves heavyweight boxing championship here tonight by outpointing Los Angeles' Kirby Seals in a slow bout.

Lee was supposed to meet Chicago's knockout artist Earl Sudduth, but Sudduth was pronounced unfit by tournament physicians before the fight was to go on. It was reported that the Chicagoan was suffering from influenza. In his four previous Gloves bouts, Sudduth had won four knockouts.

Seals, Lee's alternate, used rushing tactics, and Lee was booed when he backed away and stabbed his left into Seals' face. However, Lee's strategy worked.

Lee won the Washington Golden Gloves title last month and was a member of the United States Olympic squad in 1948.

Goldstein, Schwartz Gain AAU Handball Finals

Gus Goldstein and Jack Schwartz last night advanced to the finals of the District of Columbia AAU handball tournament which take place Tuesday night at the Jewish Community Center.

In a 2½-hour semifinal at JCC last night, Goldstein outlasted Erv Ornstein, 14-21, 21-16, 21-15. And in the other semifinal, Schwartz disposed of Dick Moore, 13-21, 21-8, 21-5.

Miceli Kayos Riccio

New York, March 29 (AP).—Joe Miceli, 21-year-old New York welterweight prospect, stopped veteran Tony Riccio of Bayonne, N. J., in 1:06 of the fourth round of the 10-round feature bout at St. Nicholas Arena tonight.

Brian Bell Injured Working Out With Giants' Farm Club

A freak accident has interrupted Brian Bell's second professional sport fling and he's currently recuperating at George Washington University Hospital.

Working out with the New York Giants' Knoxville club at Sanford, Fla., Bell received a painful knee injury when his spikes caught when he slipped after a batting swing. Exact ligament and tendon damage can't be ascertained yet.

Bell, who lives with his mother at 309 N. Thomas st., Arlington, will be on cruches for a couple of weeks but has hopes the injury won't end his baseball career.

The 22-year-old former baseball and football star at Washington and Lee University and Western High received trials last year with the Washington Redskins and Detroit Lions. He also played with Wilmington of the American Football League.

Detroit's Howe 'Improved'

Toronto Players Absolved In Serious Hockey Injury

Detroit, March 29 (AP).—The National Hockey League today opened a full scale investigation into a Stanley Cup playoff game incident that sent Detroit's Gordie Howe to a hospital with serious head injuries last night.

President Clarence Campbell took personal charge of the probe even as hospital reports indicated the 21-year1old hockey player had shown some improvement after undergoing a delicate brain operation.

Team Doctor C. L. Tomsu and Dr. Frederick Schreiber, a brain specialist, reported that X-rays showed there was no skull fracture. Howe's nose and right cheekbone were fractured, however, and he suffered an eye laceration.

Dr. Tomsu said the optical injury would not be permanent, but he added that further surgery the 21-year-old hockey player had would be in order to relieve a brain pressure. There was no indication when it would be performed.

Campbell conferred with officials of both teams today before summoning the game officials to his hotel room for a two-hour session at which all details of the incident were discussed.

He said that statements from three of the game officials indicated that no Toronto player was responsible for the injury.

That came a few hours after Coach Tommy Ivan of the Red Wings had accused Ted Kennedy of Toronto of butting Howe with the end of his hockey stick.

Campbell termed the injury a "very unfortunate thing, but one of the hazards of the game."

Campbell criticized Coach Tommy Ivan of Detroit for saying after the game that Kennedy had butt-ended Howe with his stick.

"That is a pretty serious business and a very vicious charge," Campbell said. "I assume it was made in a fit of anger after the game because we all get pretty excited at times like that," he added.

Cambria, Acosta in Cuban Court

Nats' Farm Will Field Team For Loop Opener Despite Row

Miami, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Court action now pending in Havana won't prevent the Cubans from fielding a team in the Florida International League opening Monday, President Phil O'Connell was told today.

Assurance was given by Merito Acosta, ousted president who headed the club since the league was formed in 1946 and has carried his case to the Cuban courts, and Joe Cambria, representing majority owner Clark Griffith.

Both assured O'Connell action will not affect the team and it will be in Lakeland for the opening game Monday night. The Cubans won the league pennant each year since it was organized.

O'Connell said his only interest was in the league's welfare and that he did not go into the club dispute during a closed hearing with club stockholders here today.

"That is a court matter and I was satisfied when Acosta and Cambria assured me that the league controversy would not affect the team," O'Connell said.

"They reported that spring practice is being held and that the team will be ready for the opening of the season Monday."

Star Back Is D. C. Native

Redskins Sign GW's Al DuGoff

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON-BORN and bred Al DuGoff yesterday became a surprise addition to the Redskins.

He signed a contract that gives him a chance to make a unique sweep of playing high school, college and professional football in his hometown.

Al Du Goff

DuGoff has the distinction of being the first bona fide local product ever signed by the Redskins.

DuGoff had a great year at George Washington U. last season but was overlooked completely in the National Football League draft that included 390 college seniors. That means that the Redskins passed him over in their 30 choices.

It seems strange, at that. DuGoff merited a little attention after tallying 11 touchdowns to finish high among Southern Conference scoring leaders. He certainly forced himself into the limelight when he raced for four touchdowns against VPI, including a kickoff return of 105 yards.

Against Lafayette, he galloped 80 yards in the mud for a dramatic touchdown that won the game for GW. Although hurt in the Georgetown victory, Al scored twice and gained 59 yards in 10 tries.

DuGOFF PLAYED four varsity years at GW but came into his own when Bob Rowland shifted him to fullback and made him concentrate on offense last season.

He played on a mediocre Roosevelt High team but managed to gain All-High honors.

DuGoff lives with his parents at 5044 Hanna pl. se. His father is a tailor at Woodward & Lothrop. Al, who was just 21 last month, majored in pharmacy at GW and still has some academic work left. Currently, he's an apprentice pharmacist at Investment Pharmacy, 15th and K sts. nw.

Redskin Coach Herman Ball considers DuGoff well worth a trial. Said Ball, "He's a fine physical specimen and his past record warrants him a good look."

DuGoff matured late and currently weighs 200 pounds and they're spread compactly over his 5-foot-11 frame.

GW Coach Bo Rowland, who recommended him to the Redskins as one of the fastest men on his squad, thinks he has a chance.

"It's hard to tell," Bo said, "I've never been in pro football and I don't know exactly what they want or what their standards are. But he's a hard worker and an easy boy to coach."

Then Bo sighed, "I know I'll sure miss him."

DuGoff, the quiet studious type who had an academic scholarship at GW, said yesterday he's happy to get a chance to play pro ball.

"I don't know myself whether I can make the grade," he said, "but if I don't it won't be for not trying."

Filly by Name of On Splashes Home First in Anne Arundel Purse

My Rose 2d; Daily Double Pays $90.80

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., March 29.—On short on name but long on what it takes to win horse races, proved the best of seven fillies competing in the Anne Arundel purse, featuring a rather dreary afternoon of turf sport.

Almost half of the money played on the 6-furlong event was on the chances of On, a daughter of Heliopolis performing in the colors of the High Ground stable. The filly made good by a length and a half margin and brought her legion of backers a $4 mutuel.

Walter M. Jeffords' My Rose was second with a length plus separating her from Mrs. Ada L. Rice's

Strange Target Of Strange Booing

Laurel, Md., March 29.—Jockie Bobbie Strange received one of the most uncalled-for boo-ings in the history of sports here today. Apache Trail fell with him approaching the stretch in the seventh race. Strange escaped with a mud bath, remounted and rode back to the finish line. Several disgruntled bettors gave him a raspberry reception. Strange managed to force a smile. HAIGHT.

Coming Event, coupled with a stablemate, Bows and Knots, in the betting.

On, winner of her previous race at Hialeah Park by six lengths, was clocked in 1:13 2/5 for the six furlongs. The track was sloppy and mud baths were standard equipment for the riders, including Apprentice Nolan Griffith who was aboard the winner.

The crowd of 8596 watched racing return to normalcy after yesterday's longshot barrage. Both favorites and outsiders had their innings on the midweek card.

The entry of Bows and Knots and Coming Event tried to give On the one-two punch. Bows and Knots went to the front and set a sizzling pace in an effort to kill off the favorite. However, young Griffith sat tight in good position and waited.

Bows and Knots finally became tangled, or at least weakened. At this point, Coming Event was supposed to drive into contention. But On simply took command when asked and it was all over. My Rose had some closing ability to be second.

$90.80 Daily Double

Coming Events rallied in the stretch but his effort was good only for the show position, some four lengths behind the winner.

The program opened on a monetary downbeat and many fans believed another "trip to the moon" day was in the offing. G. M. Cohen's Gaby H, a first-time starter, was the winner at $30. However W. W. Waters' Devotedly, a favorite, at long last got home in front in the second race at $6.20.

Gaby H, was the first winner of Jockey Maurice (Moose) Peters who is riding this year for the first time since 1941. Peters, now 32, kept the colt in front all the way.

Those who teamed Gaby H and Devotedly in the daily double collected $90.80 for the $2 investment on the 1-8 combination.

Warms Up for Janiro Friday

Colorful Rocky Even Packs 'Em In at Gym Session

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, MARCH 29 (NYHT).—As a sort of obeisance to the arrival of spring weather, somebody had opened a window in Stillman's gym but the air indoors, which is practically an heirloom, remained unchanged, being much too thick to pass through so narrow an aperture.

Perspiration popped out on the forehead of a rather beefy visitor, and he wondered aloud whether he oughtn't stop in a decompression chamber before departing.

Red Smith

The joint was full, as joints always are when Rocky Graziano is training or fighting. The former middleweight champion stood leaning against a wall, waiting for a ring to clear so he could do his last hitch of sparring in preparing for his match with Tony Janiro in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

His hands were bandaged and he wore green boxing trunks, a clean white T-shirt, a beaten-up bathrobe of indeterminate color, and an assortment of whiskers which he apparently was keeping as souvenirs.

He said the head cold which had made him sluggish the day before was much improved. He looked rough and tough and powerful, with his thick, strong legs and great body and heavy, sloping shoulders.

"There was a piece in the paper," he was told, "where Janiro says that if you choke him with one hand and hold him against the ropes, he'll choke you with two."

"HE'LL NEED to do something," Rocky said, grinning faintly. Then he said seriously, "There won't be no choking in this fight. I hope—" He seemed about to say something Boy Scoutish, but he caught the China blue eye of his proprietor, Careful Irving Cohen, and fell silent, grinning sheepishly.

He said he had sparred almost 100 rounds in the last three weeks, which is a lot of boxing for him before a fight, although, he thought, not the most he'd ever done. In Miami, where he took his family for two months during the winter, he'd just boxed and boxed and boxed.

"With amateurs," he said. "If I stayed down there about 200 years, I'd be the champion of Miami."

He polished off his Florida visit by knocking out one Joe Curcio in the first round.

"Could that guy fight at all?" he was asked.

He frowned thoughtfully. "Well, I'll tell you," he said. "I hit him one good indelicacy punch and the fight was over. No, I guess Joe can't fight much these days."

JACK HEALEY, one of his mob, said, "I asked him why he stiffened the guy so soon when he could of had a few rounds of work. 'He got too indelicacy fresh,' he told me. 'He hit me a couple of indelicacy good punches. They're supposed to respect me around here."

Rocky said he had no definite plans beyond the Janiro fight.

"I just want another fight," he said. "I'll tell you, I'd like to fight Sugar Robinson this year. I really and truly honestly want to fight him this year. Next year I might be starting to run down some, but this year I might hit him a good belt and knock him off.

"I'd rather have Robinson than fight for the title. It'd be a better win for me, and it's be a good payday, too. That's what I keeping telling Irving here, and he keeps saying, 'Take it easy, you're only a baby.' Hell, I'll soon be as old as Irving. I really and truly want that fight."

Graziano will be 28 in June. Old age is far away but for a brawler who used to thrive on competition, and probably one who will always do best when he fights oftenest because he is not the fancy type who can sharpen his weapons by gymnasium practice, he has had much time to rust in the last few years.

SINCE TONY ZALE knocked him out and regained the title in June, 1948, Rocky has had less than 25 rounds of fighting. Bobby Claus had him on the floor in Wilmington, Del., but he got up and stiffened Claus in the second round. He meant to carry Joe Agosta, his next opponent, for a few rounds to get some work, but Agosta cut him in the first heat so Rocky flattened him in the second.

After that, Charley Fusari took him into the tenth round and was winning on points until Graziano caught fire and won by a knockout. Then there was a 10-round decision over Sonny Horne, and the quickie with Curcio.

Still, he didn't look rusty in his final four rounds of sparring with a heavy lightweight named Bobby Tinson and James Hardy, 155 pounds. He took leisurely batting practice on the fleeing Tinson, who seemed glad to retire after two rounds.

With Hardy he would slow down for a moment now and then, shuffling forward in a weaving crouch, whereupon Hardy would shoot for the head with both hands. Stung, Rocky would slug the head and body in a characteristic flurry.

"That's his flying saucer," said Murray Goodman, the publicist, "that looping left."

Getting out of the ring, Rocky saw Goodman. "Got the silk hat?" he asked, and explained, "Murray wants to take a picture of me in a silk hat and tux."

"Instead of a cap?" a guy said. "On you it would look good."

Charoton Pulls Upset In Rokeby

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Upperville, Va., March 29. Charoton, owned and ridden by Cyrus Manierre of Middleburg, Va., magnificently upset a top field of foxchasers in winning the ninth running of the Rokeby Challenge Bowl race at the Piedmont Hunt Point-to-Point Races held here on Paul Mellon's spacious Rokeby Farm near here today.

Charoton was well rated and proved the best of the seven horse field that negotiated the 5½-mile course over 22 solid timber fences with the stretch run the deciding factor as four horses headed for the final fence in near unison.

Brown Stockings, a heavy prerace favorite by virtue of his victories at Redland and Blue Ridge, jumped into an early lead with Nicholas de Felsovanyi doing the leg work, but the terrific pace proved too much for the game little horse and he fell some 40 lengths in front after going around three miles. Felsovanyi remounted and set out in pursuit of the field which he caught only to jump into a road which Brown Stockings decided to take instead of the course and was pulled up.

The Ladies race proved an exciting one with R. V. Clark's Happy Chance, ridden by Sally Roszell, the eventual winner.

DEAR FOLKS;

Nobody in the press box had a dime on Gaby H, the $30 winner of the first race. The colt was named for Gaby Haugh, popular Baltimore turf writer who reported the 2-year-old was "about to buck his shins." There's the makings of a little joke on Bill Dyer, Baltimore sportscaster who gave the Maryland Racing Commission a going over for reinstating Jockey Moose Peters who was suspended for cruelty. G. M. Cohen has named a colt for Dyer and when the youngster goes to the post, Peters will be the jockey. There are 95 jockeys here. Post time for the first race at Havre De Grace will be 1:45 p. m. Trainer Asks City to Lift State's Ban

Baltimore, March 29 (AP)—Salvatore J. Cicero asked the Baltimore City Court today to make the Maryland Racing Commission remove its suspension of him as a horse owner and trainer.

Cicero was suspended for 10 years on a charge his mare, Rough Ordy, was stimulated in a race at Pimlico last October 28. Rough Ordy won the race. Cicero was forced to sell rough Ordy and other horses he owned.

Cicero's request for a writ of mandamus claimed his hearing before the commission was a "mere sham or pretense."

The suit charged that H. Courtenay Jenifer, commission chairman, had acted as "prosecutor as well as judge" by calling a witness not produced by the attorney general.

This witness, Cicero stated, was "so unreliable that neither the State nor the defense called upon him." The witness' story of stimulation was not supported by other testimony, the Baltimore owner claimed.

Cicero asked the court to issue a writ forcing the race commission to rescind his suspension on the ground it was unreasonable, arbitrary, capricious and unconstitutional.

Judge J. Abner Sayler gave the commission 10 days in which to show why Cicero's petition should not be granted.

Winter Catch of Rockfish Starts Rush of Surf Casting

By Ralph Murdock

ANGLERS, something new has been added. It pertains to surf casting. The evidence comes from Herbert Bingham, prominent local attorney in the Tower Building who spent the past weekend at his summer home in Rehoboth Beach Delaware.

Murdock

By surf casting between Bethany and Fenwick the lawyer nabbed three striped bass which weighed 1½, 4½ and 15 pounds. The bait used was a lead squid with a strip of pork rind attached.

"Up until January 18 of this year" says Bingham, "no one had ever caught a rockfish during the winter months in that area by surf casting."

After the fish quit biting in the Indian River Inlet, which was December 15, the attorney said that the anglers assumed that the fun was over and pulled up.

But up popped an angler named Pleasant McCarthy who operates a bait stand during the regular season. Mack had nothing but "time" on his hands.

His initial effort on January 18 proved one thing—that the stripers could be caught in the winter season by surf fishing. Since that date he has hauled in 182 rockfish, the largest of which hit the 27-pound mark. His best catch in one day was 48, which totaled 297 pounds.

SINCE THE DISCOVERY, said Mr. Bingham, almost everyone in the area has turned to surf fishing and the results are almost unbelievable—but good.

Mrs. Melvin D. Losey, a feminine fresh water enthusiast of Arlington, Va., got the thrill of her piscatorial career on the St. John's River in Florida when she hooked onto a 13-pound 3½-ounce black bass. The scrapper measured 28¼ inches in length and had a girth of 20¼ inches. She was staying at the Sportsmen's Lodge in Walaka, Fla. The big bruiser was enticed by the use of live bait.

The National Capital Casting Club will hold its annual meeting for election of officers for 1950 tonight at 8 o'clock. The place—Takoma Lodge Hall, Carroll and Maple sts., Takoma Park, D. C. Door prizes will be awarded and refreshments by Harry Sollers and his committee will be on tap.

HERE'S A QUICKIE on the local fishing angle. Hickory shad are being taken in nets between Pig Point and Hill's Bridge in the upper Patuxent. Herring are quite plentiful in the Patuxent near Queen Anne's Bridge. A catch of 3½ bushels was taken by one netter last week. Fair catches are also being made at Rock Creek.

Captain Shorter at Benedict informs us that large schools of white perch are heading up the Patuxent for Big Point, where they will spawn. The Pig Point area should be the hot spot in a few days.

George Leake caught 23 yellow perch in the Severn River at Herald Harbor. He said they are through spawning. Herring made their first appearance in the upper Potomac River Tuesday afternoon. No perch or shad in this spot—YET. We can hardly wait.

McKinney Takes Over Caps

Bob Feerick officially stepped out of the Washington Caps picture yesterday and Bones McKinney immediately launched plans for next season.

Player-Coach Feerick, one of pro basketball's greats in his four years here, takes over as coach at Santa Clara April 10. He and his family will leave town today.

McKinney, colorful performer who's expected to stick mainly to coaching, revealed that he seeks five players in the college draft next month.

Bones emphasized that he plans to present a fast-breaking attack built around Don Otten, 7-foot center. The Caps have scouted all the major college tournaments.

The draft is a grab-bag proposition but the Caps have liked the looks of Irwin Dambrot, CCNY; Dick Dickey, North Carolina, and Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown.

The Merrick Boys Club 150-pound basketball team defeated Police Boys Club No. 12, 55-51, last night at the South East Boys Club court with Buddie Bowie pacing the winners with 14 while Snookie Kernan got 12 for No. 12.

Want 40-Minute Basketball

College Coaches Vote to Kill Controversial 2-Minute Rule

New York, March 29 (AP).—The National Association of Basketball coaches voted today to give the boot to the controversial two-minute rule.

By a 63-21 vote the college coaches agreed to recommend a return to the 40-minute game under which the rules would be the same throughout the contest.

Now it is up to the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada which has the final say on the regulations.

This supreme body started deliberating tonight and by the end of the week a final decision will be made.

It is a good bet that the coaches' recommendations will be put into the book for next season.

In addition to voting for the abolishment of the two-minute rule, the coaches also recommended the following changes:

1—That the whole game be timed the same.

2—That any ball sent over and behind the backboard be declared out of bounds.

3—That defensive teams on all free throws should have the two positions closest to the basket.

4—That free substitutions be permitted only when the clock is stopped. For substitutions at any one time, a time out will be charged.

Des Moines Defends Title

The American Athletic Association for the Deaf's sixth annual basketball tournament has drawn eight Nation-wide entries to Washington this weekend.

Des Moines won the tourney last year at Oakland.

Miss Eldora Lux, a Gallaudet College senior, will be queen of the tournament. Four quarter-finals games are set for Friday night at 7 o'clock, Los Angeles playing Washington, Little Rock facing Worcester, Mass., Des Moines meeting Spartansburg, S. C., and Pittsburgh tackling Milwaukee.

Safford-Chandler Wins D. C. Title

Safford-Chandler won the men's Recreation Department basketball championship last night by defeating the Catholic Youth Organization team, 46-36 at the Roosevelt gym.

The Garvin's Grill girls won the ladies major championship, nosing out Raleigh, 38-31, while St. Martin's took the ladies minor championship, 34-23, over the Bureau of Personnel team.

Schweigert Pinned Subbing for Carnera

Nature Boy Buddy Rogers had little trouble disposing of Dutch Schweigert in the feature bout on last night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena. Schweigert was subbing for Primo Canera whose plane couldn't get into the National Airport in time for the match.

In other bouts, Miguell Torres, turned in an iron man job but lost, twice. Ivan Kamaroff pinned Torres in 19 minutes in one bout and Tony Morelli repeated the job in 19½ minutes. In a team match, the Phantoms defeated Ace Freeman and Kenny Ackles

Four San Diego Wrestlers Retain All-Navy Titles

Four San Diego sailors retained titles and another from Alameda, Calif., regained a crown he held in 1948 at last night's championship bouts in the All-Navy wrestling championships at the Naval Receiving Station.

San Diego's Dick Collyar, 125 pounds, Frankie Gigletto, 135 pounds and Al Good, 155 pounds retained their titles for the second year with Ray Hamm, taking the 175-pound crown for the third straight year. Ira Renner, 145-pounder, from Alameda, Calif., regained the title he first won in 1948 but lost last year.

115 pounds—Barnhart (Camp Lejeune) pinned Wehrheim (Camp Pendelton), 1:45, third. 125 pounds—Collyar (San Diego) decisioned Crane (Newport News), 5-4. 135 pounds—Gigleto (San Diego) decisioned Gluszek (Cherry Point), 3-2. 145 pounds—Renner (Alameda) decisioned Recchia (Quantico), 3-0. 155 pounds—Good (San Diego) decisioned Belcher (Great Lakes), 7-6. 165 pounds—Vohden (Cherry Point) pinned Andrews (Guam), 0:35, second. 175 pounds—Hamm (San Diego) decisioned Fridrich (Norfolk), 4-1. Heavyweight—Gibson (San Diego) decisioned Pacie (Memphis), 7-0.

New GOP Job-Cut Plan, By Rider on Money Bill, Has Officials Concerned

The newest GOP plan to cut jobs would not abolish as many of them as advertised, but it has Federal officials concerned nevertheless.

The general Republican idea is to forbid Federal agencies from filling vacancies by tying a rider onto the omnibus money bill now before the House. A decision will be made Friday at a strategy meeting of House Republicans, on what type of rider, if any, will be offered.

Representative John Taber (N. Y.), ranking GOP member of the House Appropriations Committee, concedes that the Defense agencies, Veterans Administration, and perhaps other agencies, would have to be exempted from such a rider since they have already made substantial layoffs. But it just happens that these agencies have more than half of all Federal jobs, and if Post Office were added, it would be 70 percent.

Some Republican leaders say the abolish-job-vacancies plan would cut the payroll by 20 percent, or about 350,000 employes and save a billion or two annually. Neither is likely if the proposal should unexpectedly get approval.

Turnover is now down to 13 percent a year, and that includes transfers that would not be prohibited under the GOP suggestion. Of the 1,800,000 Federal jobs in this country, a turnover of 234,000 annually is indicated. If Defense agencies and VA were exempted and transfers eliminated, fewer than 100,000 jobs would be vacated in the other agencies. The total salary saving would be about $300 million.

Any proposal now to cut employes is taken a bit seriously by Federal officials, who fear anything could happen with the mood Congress is in at present. They say the plan is entirely unrealistic and unworkable and ask: "What if all the phone operators or some other vital crew quit? Work output would be cut in half for hundreds of people to save a few $2500 salaries."

AGRICULTURE: Not only would Agriculture not get the 2600 new jobs the President requested for it in his budget, but the department would have to make a small reduction in its present staff under the budget before the House.

The biggest staff cut would have to be made in the Agricultural Research Administration, which was slashed $3,500,000. About 400 employes would lose their jobs and insect-control campaigns and research generally would be curtailed if the House bill became law.

The ARA reduction would be offset somewhat by an expansion of Rural Electrification Administration. REA would be given funds to hire about 250 employes to handle its new rural phone program. Soil Conservation Service also would get a few new employes.

On the other hand, most Agriculture staff offices, such as the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, would have to tighten their belts. The Forest Service would have to reduce instead of hiring about 700 new workers as the President proposed.

CAPITOL HILL: The full Civil Service Committee today will hear top Defense officials on the Administration bill to give them and other officials the power to fire employes summarily on "security" charges . . . The Davis subcommittee yesterday failed to agree on the Rhodes bill to give organized Federal employes collective bargaining rights.

NOTES: William E. Becker, Securities and Exchange personnel chief, has been given a pat on the back by the Budget Bureau for overhauling his personnel record system . . . May M. Nichols is retiring from the Army Adjutant General's Office after 31 years of service . . . JOBS: At Freedmen's Hospital here, examinations are open for kitchen helper and laundry worker, $2120 to $2252 annually; the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda has tests open for hospital attendant, $2650 to $3130, and housekeeper, $8 to $8.96 a day . . . At Mount Alto Hospital here, examinations are open for various types of medical technicians, $2875 to $3450 starting salaries. Go to Civil Service for further details . . . Several Senators are interested in getting additional funds for VA to prevent the layoff of 7800 employes there by mid-April.

Hyattsville High Pupils Play Host To Concord Group in Visitation Plan

STUDIOUS SIGHT-SEEERS—Representatives Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.) and Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) take high school students from Concord, Mass., and Hyattsville, Md., on a tour of Statuary Hall in the United States Capitol. The visiting students are staying in the homes of the Hyattsville students while in Washington

Hyattsville High School students will find out about the traditional New England town meeting today. A group of 30 students and two teachers from Concord, Mass., are visiting Hyattsville this week as part of an exchange program. The Concord students will stage a "town meeting" at an assembly in the Hyattsville High School this morning.

The visitors will be taken to the Naval Observatory tonight and Friday will visit the State House and Naval Academy at Annapolis, returning for a dance at the high school at night.

A group of Hyattsville High students will go to Concord for a week's visit April 22. The Concord students are staying in the homes of Hyattsville students and a reciprocal arrangement has been made for the Maryland group.

The visitors went to the Capitol yesterday and had their pictures taken with Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), their own Congresswoman. They also visited the Congressional Library, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

The group will return to Concord Saturday. They are accompanied by Harold O'Connor, English teacher and track coach, and Miss Miriam Clark, girl's physical education instructor.

2 Holdups Keep Crime Pace Swift

Robberies Spaced 40 Minutes Apart Laid to Same Man By Busy Police

A 4 a.m., Cab Driver Charles R. Poole of 1512 52d pl., Spaulding Heights, Md., picked up the man in the brown hat (and brown coat) and took him to 17th and Shepherd sts. nw.

There he was confronted with a .32 caliber revolver, relieved of $9, and robbed of his cab. The cab was found later at 14th and Ogden sts. nw.

About 40 minutes later, in another section of the city, a man carrying a .32 caliber revolver and wearing a brown slouch hat and a brown coat held up a filling station at 1248 Pennsylvania ave. se.

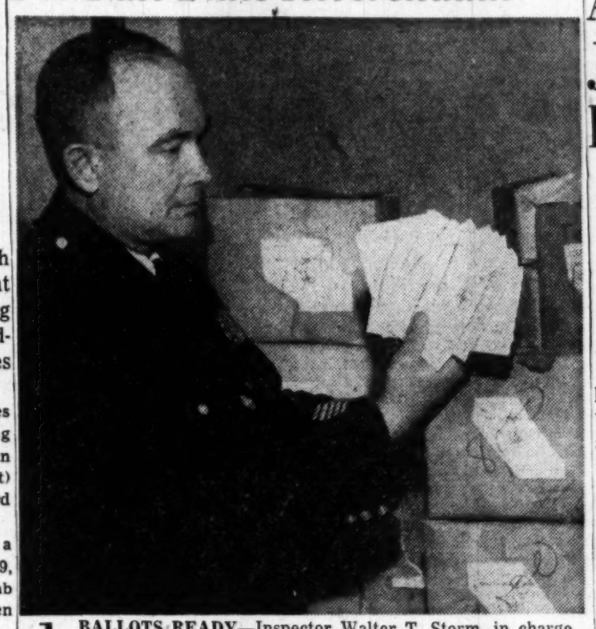
Thieves Remove Safe Containing $2407

Thieves who entered the Williams Chevrolet Company in Silver Spring early yesterday used tools found in the garage to remove a small safe containing $2407 in cash and checks, Montgomery County police reported.

Included among the $1300 cash was money collected for the Red Cross from employes of the firm, located at 1339 East-West hwy.

200,000 Ballots Prepared For Fast Time Referendum



1. BALLOTS READY—Inspector Walter T. Storm, in charge of distribution of ballots to police precincts, received 200,000 of the printed forms yesterday. The forms were then sent to precincts throughout the city

2. FIRST DELIVERY—Tenth Precinct Pvt. Douglas M. Smith delivered the first batch of forms last night. John P. Labofish, 4000 17th st. nw., president of the Crestwood Citizens Association, was ready for work as a block captain after receiving instructions from Private Smith

The Washington Post

3. FIRST STOP—Block Captain Labofish calls on Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vogel, 1708 Taylor st. nw., to get their opinion on daylight saving time. Each adult in a house is allowed to vote. The Vogels cast a split ballot

The Commissioners' poll to find if District residents want daylight saving time was set in motion yesterday but it was a balky start.

During the next week, 200,000 ballots will be distributed among the citizenry and by next Wednesday District fathers hope to have some inkling of where sentiment lies on the question of DST.

Yesterday afternoon, Acting Police Superintendent Robert S. Bryant announced that the ballots were being distributed at that moment to the police precincts throughout the city.

A police directive to all commanding officers was prepared specifying that beat patrolmen should make a house-to-house canvass with the ballots.

But only the day before yesterday the Commissioners had decided a door-to-door canvass by police would be impossible and had substituted a plan to have citizen "block captains" do the job under police supervision.

A second directive ordered that precinct captains distribute the ballots to their men on beats.

It will be the responsibility of the individual policeman to select one citizen in each block on his beat to serve as "block captain."

The "block captain" will poll adult residents in his block, as many as he can, and will return the marked ballots to the beat policeman.

The beat policeman will return the completed ballots to his captain. The captain will tally the results for his precinct and forward them to Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, who will in turn pass them along to the Commissioners.

Nurse Tells Abortion Jury She Still Loves Myers

Saw No Evidence Of Blood on Return To Apartment, No Signs of Disorder

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Nurse Ruth Childs whispered from the District Court witness stand yesterday that she still loved the married man now on trial for the abortion death of Nina Jean Campbell.

Cross-Examined 3 Hours

The body of Mrs. Campbell, a 20-year-old mother of two small children, was found badly beaten and bitten in Miss Childs' apartment, 1321 Fairmont st. nw.

Miss Childs underwent a grueling three hours of cross-examination by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin yesterday, the sixth day of the trial.

Her testimony shed new light on when the beating was inflicted on Mrs. Campbell, last seen alive at 9 p. m., January 4, when she was left alone with Myers in Miss Childs' apartment, according to previous testimony.

Miss Childs yesterday testified that when she returned to her apartment at 11 p. m. she found Mrs. Campbell apparently dead.

No Bruises, Just "Splotches"

But she said there was "no blood on the sheet, and I didn't see anything I would call bruises, just blue splotches on her neck."

"Did you see any tooth marks?" Laughlin asked.

"No."

"Any scratches?"

"You didn't see anything that would indicate an illegal operation?"

"No."

"Nothing was in disorder?"

"That's correct."

It was at the end of his cross-examination after luncheon recess that Laughlin probed Miss Childs' present feelings for his client. Earlier in the trial she testified that she had had "intimate relations" with Myers and that she "loved and trusted him."

Do you still love Mr. Myers," Laughlin asked.

Doubtful on Absolute Love

"You love him with all your heart and soul, isn't that right?"

"I don't know."

"You still would love to marry him?"

"No."

When did she stop feeling that she wanted to marry Myers? Laughlin asked.

"He's a married man with three children," she replied softly.

Harry S. Walker, jr., 1622 Wisconsin ave. nw., manager of the Fairmont st. apartment, testified he had received complaints of a "wild party" in Miss Childs' apartment on the night of January 4, and had relayed the complaint to Miss Childs the following morning.

Eugene Charles Rae, assistant food manager at Murphy's 5 and 10 cent store at 3128 14th st. nw., testified he had watched Miss Childs make repeated efforts "to call her apartment" from the New Amsterdam Cafe, 14th and Girard sts. nw., shortly before midnight January 4.

Rat-Infested Dump Charged At Girls' School

The Board of Public Welfare was roundly criticized yesterday for allowing a rat-infested dump on the grounds of the National Training School for Girls.

Mrs. Gerald E. Keene, of 5274 Loughborough rd. nw., told a Senate District subcommittee that the dump on the school grounds, MacArthur blvd. and Loughborough rd., is a health menace.

It is frequently on fire, she said, and when residents in the area complain, the fire is put out, a Commissioners' "no dumping" sign is posted, and the dumping promptly resumes.

The grounds abound with thousands of rats, she said.

District Public Welfare Director Gerard M. Shea explained the dumping was being done to provide a playground for children housed in the annex of the Industrial Home School.

She said the District had no funds to make the play area, but was relying on the help of building contractors to get the place filled in. He promised the Senators he would order a cleanup.

Mrs. Keene spoke against a bill to let the District make increased use of the training school facilities.

The subcommittee also heard Corporation Counsel Vernon West, Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, and former District Health Officer George C. Ruhland advocate a bill making it standard practice for doctors to report all cases of cancer and similar malignant diseases.

False Alarms Send Man To Gallinger

A 41-year-old unemployed handyman, who admitted setting off five false alarms late Tuesday and early yesterday, was ordered sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation by Municipal Court Judge Frank H. Myers. His trial was continued until May 2.

The man, Leon T. Johnson, 41, of 1618 Rosedale st. ne., was arrested about 1:30 a. m. yesterday when a passerby watched him pull an alarm in the 200 block of 15th st. se.

Johnson said he set off the alarms, in sections of the northeast and southeast, because he just "liked to see the engines run."

The alarms brought out 40 pieces of fire equipment. Scout cars from the Fifth, Ninth and Eleventh Precincts were alerted as a result of the alarms.

Johnson said he travelled from one box location to another on streetcars and buses.

Man Freed Of Gaming in 'Quickie' Trial

Whether they play bridge uptown or "skin" downtown, Judge Alexander Holtzoff let it be known yesterday that kibitzers or participants in social card games shouldn't go to jail.

George Cannon, 44, was charged with setting up a gaming table for "skin" at 1527 6th st. nw. "Skin" is a card game where wagers are made on whether a card "skimmed" off the top of the deck will match cards held by players.

Assistant United States Attorney John D. Lane said that Cannon did not "cut" the pot and may have made no profit from the game.

Cannon was a participant in the game on one occasion and merely an onlooker on another, the prosecutor said.

"Do you wish a trial by the court?" asked the judge of Defense Counsel Albert Graham.

"Yes sir," said the lawyer.

"Do you agree with the statement of facts as given by the prosecutor?"

"Yes sir," said the lawyer.

"Then your client is not guilty," announced Judge Holtzoff.

Only 4 Schools To Compete in Battalion Drill

The decline in cadet corps enrollment will be reflected Monday when only 4 of the city's 10 white high schools will participate in the annual battalion competition.

For the first time Anacostia High School will send two battalions into drill. The school with a roster of 191 cadets has the largest military organization in the city.

Other schools that will send in battalions for the competition at 2:30 p. m. in the Central stadium are Western, Wilson and Roosevelt.

Western has a roster of 64 cadets; Wilson, 66, and Roosevelt, 95.

Bell Vocational School will be unable to enter its battalion of 65 cadets. The school has been operating in two buildings several miles apart and students who spend part of the week at one school and the rest at the other haven't been able to get together for practice.

Emory Smith Mentioned For Judgeship

Emory B. Smith, prominent Washington Negro lawyer, yesterday was again reported slated for a Municipal Court judgeship, but indications were the final decision had not been made.

Smith himself said he had received no official notice that he was to get the job, either before or after a report to that effect was published yesterday.

Smith is understood to have the support of Representative William L. Dawson (D., Ill(a Negro member of the House.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Hubert Pair is also reported under consideration. Coupled with word of the Smith and Pair candidacies went some reports that the controversy over them was so sharp that the judgeship might go to a white man.

U. S. Worker Gets 90 Days In Morals Case

Convicted by a Municipal Court jury of committing an indecent act in a Lafayette Park restroom, a chauffeur of the Maritime Commission yesterday was sentenced to 90 days in jail by Judge George D. Neilson.

The defendant, Warren T. Turner, lived at 4416 Dix st. ne., when he was arrested December 19. Pvt. Clarence W. Knotts of the Third Precinct testified he witnessed the indecent act.

In jailing Turner, Judge Neilson asserted that "you cannot merely fine" perverts. "We cannot handle these cases lightly," he asserted.

"Here is a man who worked for an important Government agency," the judge declared. "We've been hearing reports of sex perversion that have even gone to the extent where there is a threat to the security of the country.

"Sex perversion may well lead to other crimes and is directly dangerous to the safety and welfare of the city . . . We must take stern measures," the judge added.

Why Can't D. C. Buy New Traffic Lights? Group Asks

The Burroughs Citizens Association last night asked for a clarification of the city-wide traffic-light problem.

In a petition addressed to the Federation of Citizens Associations, the group asked why the District reportedly lacks funds for installation of lights in places of obvious need.

Meeting at the Taft Junior High School, 18th and Perry sts. ne., the association also urged the District Commissioners to investigate and clarify the financial responsibility of the property owner in regard to damaged water lines, and asked the District Commissioners and the Metropolitan Police Department to look into overnight parking by trucks in the Burroughs area.

Mrs. Estelle Proctor, of 4900 E. Capitol st., said that she discovered her loss when she left the bus at 49th and Central ave. ne., then hailed a cab to catch the bus, and at 53d and E. Capitol sts. saw a man get off the bus with her purse under his coat.

Upon her demand the man surrendered the bag and fled, Mrs. Proctor said, but when she opened the purse $65 in bills was missing.

Safecrack Suspects Charge Arlington Police Beat Them

Charges that two Arlington County policemen were involved in the beating of three safecracking suspects last Monday were lodged yesterday with Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg.

Attorney William J. Hassan filed the affidavits asking that the policemen be brought before the county police trial board in what would be the first case to come before the year-old board. Hassan declined to identify the policemen to reporters.

Complaints against the policemen are: William Kirkpatrick, 26, of 1415 1st st. nw., Washington; Cleaven Cordell, 32, same address, and Charles Williams, 45, of 1816 9th st. nw., Washington.

The three, one of whom Williams claims was struck by a blackjack, will be tried at 10 a. m. today in Arlington County Court on charges of breaking into the Fairlington Laundry, 3800 S. Four Mile Run dr.

The defendants were captured early Monday by Policemen Truman Adams and H. G. Thompson in a chase that ended less than a mile from the laundry. Police said Kirkpatrick was arrested when he fled from a stolen truck containing a safe with $2500. Williams and Cordell were arrested hiding in a parked auto near the laundry, according to police.

County Manager Lundberg said yesterday that the charges "are being investigated." Police Chief Harry Woodyard said, "I have no statement to make other than that it is being investigated."

5352 Auto Tags Sold for Total Of 141,702 as Deadline Nears

Friday is the deadline for getting new District auto tags, and the usual last-minute jam has developed in the Municipal Center registration office.

Officials reported 141,702 tags sold this month through yesterday—about 12,000 more than last year. Yesterday 5352 tags—nearly 13 a minute—were sold. George E. Keneipp, director of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, expects a total March sale of 155,000 tags.

Supervising Inspector Charles W. Reed said inspection stations were not crowded yesterday. All cars requiring inspection should make the March 31 deadline, he said.

Persons driving with old tags after Friday midnight may be fined up to $300 and/or jailed for 10 days, officials said. Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller said his men would not start ticketing cars until 8 a. m. Saturday.

Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson reported that more than 100 checks received in payment for tags have bounced.

The Best Oil Known to Science made by the new "HEART-CUT" PROCESS

Remarkable new anti-fouling oil . . . gives you a cleaner engine . . . more economy . . . minimum carbon residue.

It's here now! The remarkable motor oil from the giant new $42,000,000 lubricating oil plant at Lake Charles, Louisiana, that's been the big talk of the oil industry for months.

New Premium Koolmotor is made by the unique "Heart-Cut" Process which retains only the choicest part of the finest crudes. The new oil is better in every way! Cleans better, seals better, cools better and fights acid, sludge and corrosion far more effectively. Switch to this remarkable new oil today.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Always Reluctant to Visit Graves, Woman Does Her Duty in This Respect Since Close Kin Died, and Wonders Why It Is an Ordeal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As long as I can remember, I have never liked to visit graves in a cemetery, although in later years, after my parents and others close to me died, I have had no scruples about attending funerals, which of course meant going to the cemetery. Nevertheless I have no desire to visit their graves.

Once in a long while, maybe once a year, I do visit the graves, mostly to see if the gravestones, etc., are in order; and then I choose to go alone, at a time when I think no one will be there.

Most of my friends and acquaintances visit the cemetery often and speak of it in general conversation, in the same easy way they might mention seeing a show or visiting friends. And at such times I feel like a traitor because I don't go. Yet these twinges don't make me want to go.

The death of near-and-dear-ones is a sacred subject to me, and something I don't care to discuss promiscuously with anyone who happens along.

As a matter of fact, for a long time after each loss, and after my husband's death, I couldn't talk of it at all. It is only now after many years have passed that I can, on rare occasions, speak of them without too much hurt.

Am I so different from other people? Is there some underlying cause for my attitude? Please advise. G. A.

Bothered by Self-Reproach

DEAR G. A.: It occurs to me that you are habitually burdened by self-reproach, and that after the fashion of neurotically anxious souls, you suffer excessively from grief, and particularly remorse, when adjusting to the death of someone very close to you.

Likely these depressed sentiments have to do with remembering that you didn't love the deceased to the fullest extent when you had the opportunity; that you were hateful, thankless, etc., on such a day—and so on.

Thus a visit to a grave becomes an occasion for compulsively kicking yourself more severely than usual about your average frailties; and I think that is why such visits are a poignant ordeal you'd rather avoid, why you restrict them to duty calls, and want to be alone with your conscience at such times.

In short, when face to face with the awful finality of an intimate's grave, your emotions reverberate with a special charge of guilt feelings which you shrink from examining.

Guilt vs. Rebellion?

IN ALL PROBABILITY you suffered from serious misunderstanding and a sense of rejection in some vital relationship in early life, with the result that your spirit is pierced with a theory that any difference between yourself and others is necessarily to your discredit — something to correct forthwith or feel worried about.

If your relations with your mother weren't adequately sympathetic, for instance; if she sharply criticized and coldly disapproved you at times, you might have momentarily hated her even while striving desperately to please her. And that kind of early experience would leave a residue of guilty anxiety and latent rebelliousness in your system, that later-life conflict with others' views might stir up again, to cloud your thinking.

For one who shrinks from visiting graves, you pursue an orthodox pace of supervisory care, it seems to me. It is the exceptional person or clan that spends much time in the cemetery. M. H.

Georgetown House Tour Offers A Blend of Tea and History

Way back in 1784, when Thomas Beall inherited the "Rock of Dunbarton" patent from his father, George Beall, one of the founders of Georgetown, he built the house which Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Graham are opening for the annual Georgetown House Tour next Friday and Saturday, from 2 to 6 p. m. It is located at 1647 30th st., known to old residents of the community as "Washington st." The house is one of eight included in the first tour day.

Built on the land grant known as "Knaves' Disappointment," the "Yellow House" as it was called in early property records, now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Alexander, 1430 33d st., is one of the eight historic and recently remodeled homes to be open Saturday.

Mrs. Irvin D. Foos, tour chairman, has arranged for hostesses in the 16 houses, all of whom are familiar with the history and treasures in the houses assigned to them. They will assist visitors and serve as guides during the afternoon. Chairman of hostesses for Friday's list is Mrs. Llewellyn D. Nicholson and her assistants Mrs. Harold W. Burnside, Mrs. A. Pierce Gault, Mrs. J. Richard Ivins, Mrs. J. Russell McQueen, Miss Lena Wilkins, Mrs. Andrew Ten Eyck and Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley.

Saturday's chairman, Mrs. Carroll Perry, jr., will be assisted by a committee of hostesses.

Prelude to Cavalcade

Greek Fashion Duenna Trains Dancing Models

By Peggy Preston

CONDUCTING a dancing class was hardly the pastime Mrs. Pandora Tsaldaris of Athens, Greece, anticipated during her first visit to America. But such, she finds, is her lot.

The slender, dark-haired young woman—daughter-in-law of Constantine Tsaldaris, former Premier of Greece—arrived in town Monday to complete plans for the Cavalcade of Fashions on April 13 at the Mayflower Hotel. Her first job has been to train a group of models to perform the Geriakina, ancient national dance of her homeland. Their costumes will be those of the Greek provinces, brought here especially for the fashion showing.

Among her "students"—there are 17 of them—is Mrs. John Davis Lodge, who has danced professionally. "After one lesson she already knows the dance as well as I do," Mrs. Tsaldaris said yesterday in an interview at the Greek Embassy, where she is a guest.

The cavalcade will be divided into three parts, with prominent women in official circles serving as models. First will be a group of 10 costumes of ancient Greece. Wearing these will be Mrs. Charles Brannan, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Clark Clifford, Mrs. Ken Regan and others.

A second group will model the 30 colorful costumes of the provinces, and perform the Greek folk dance.

Final portion of the cavalcade will be devoted to modern Greek fashions, made by leading designers of that country.

Following the showing here, the collection of fashions will be presented in New York, San Francisco, Berkeley, Calif. and Dallas, Tex. In June it will be viewed in Paris and later that month in London.

Leesburg Gets Ready for Its Open House

The continuing history of Leesburg—as shown by six of its oldest homes, a 150-year-old graveyard restored as a garden and window exhibits of historical interest—will be shown on April 29, 30 and May 1 during Leesburg "Open House," according to an announcement today by B. Powell Harrison, president of Colonial Leesburg, Inc.

This organization, which since its inception a year ago has attempted to assist Leesburg in recapturing its early American appearance and charm through preservation of old buildings and relics, is sponsoring the three-day event.

In addition to the homes and the garden, there will be a unique exhibit of more than 400 early 19th century pitchers, and many items connected with the Lee Family in Virginia.

Since the Colonial Leesburg program began, all major construction and renovation in the town has followed the early American design and a number of stores have been remodeled.

Cherry Trees Will Bloom—Indoors

Live blooming cherry trees—and don't ask where they came from—will provide a backdrop for the reception and supper dance to be given in the Terrace Room of the Shoreham Friday by the Cherry Blossom Festival Committee in honor of the 51 princesses.

The chairman of the festival and Mrs. C. J. Mack are having as their guests the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, and the Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson.

In Puerto Rico:

Women Gain Power, Omit The Fanfare

By Norma Lanum

WHEN a Puerto Rican family flocks into the dining room for dinner, it's the mother who takes the place at the head of the table and does the carving and serving.

Senora Munoz-Marin, whose husband is the first freely elected governor to the Caribbean Island, will raise her black eyebrows and confide softly "the mother, she is the head of the family there, you know."

That, according to the First Lady of Puerto, is very important.

Senora Munoz-Marin, who is visiting in Washington with the Governor, says the important role of women in their homes is one of the main reasons Puerto Rican senoras have come so far politically.

She cites, with genuine pride for her sex, the fact that women hold many high government positions on her island. Senora Felicia Rincon has been re-elected to serve a second term as mayor of the capital city, San Juan. Women also hold the No. 1 office in the cities of Salinas, Cabo Rojo and several others.

And the mistress of a coffee farm, Senora Maria Libertad Gomez, holds a seat in the House of Representatives.

Women Win Power Without Fanfare

PUERTO RICO'S first lady thinks it is a remarkable achievement for women to hold such power in the administration of the island where democracy is comparatively new.

"But we take it more naturally," she comments.

There is no rash of talk and newspaper articles about the woman legislator or the woman mayor that we evidence in the United States. Almost no special fanfare accompanies a Puerto Rican woman politician because of her sex.

Senora Munoz-Marin, who attended Columbia University and taught school for 10 years in Puerto Rico, is intensely concerned with the overpopulation of her island.

She says Puerto Rico is in the same predicament the United States would be if our population were doubled or tripled and our natural resources removed.

"We have no resources under the land," says the senora sadly. "But we have beauty on it."

Home-Grown Food One Objective

She explains how the government of her island is trying to capitalize on this beauty and the tropical trade winds in luring resort travel.

ALONG with the government program of enlarging on the island's industry, Governor Munoz-Marin and his administration are conducting a program to teach the natives to grow a well-rounded diet in their own gardens.

Herbs Are More Than Seasoning, They're a Philosophy—But They Have to Be Used Exactly Right

HERBS, it's said, are more than a seasoning. They're a culinary philosophy. Certain it is they add much to the fun of cooking and joy of dining. The problem is just which to use where.

From Shirley L. Hymowitz, 2804 Naylor st. ne., comes a list of 11 herbs. She asks the proper use of each, and answers to most of her questions are found in "The Cottage Herb Garden." This little leaflet is issued by the quaint Herb Garden Shop of the Washington Cathedral.

Here are the uses for the "herbs of fragrant savor" that she asks about:

MARJORAM—Used for flavoring salad, soup, and meat, especially lamb. Good pounded into veal cutlets or rubbed on beef roasts.

BASIL—Used in salad dressings and cottage cheese. Fine in all tomato dishes, in egg dishes, on steaks, venison and wild duck.

OREGANO—For spaghetti dishes. Fine with veal and for all meats and stews.

DILL—Used for flavoring meats and fish sauces. Seed used for pickled cucumbers and vinegar.

TARRAGON—Used for flavoring vinegar, salads, and fish sauces. Excellent in mushroom dishes, deviled eggs, and chicken dishes.

CHIVES—Used in salads, omelets, meats and meat sauces.

CHERVIL—Good in stuffed eggs, sauces, vichysoisse, French dressing. Often used where parsley is indicated.

CARDAMON—Delicious in honey flavored dishes and in cookies.

CORIANDER—Seeds used in cakes and confections.

CURRY POWDER—A combination of herb seeds and spices. Used in curried meat dishes, sauces, sometimes to flavor soups and vegetables.

CAYENNE—Used where very hot, sharp pepper flavor is wanted.

POPPY—Seeds used principally in baked goods.

Leaflets giving more information and recipes for herb dishes are available at the Cottage Herb Shop and other stores stocking herbs.

Except my diamond ring!

Don't wash dishes with it on, Petunia! Why don't you screw a cup hook to the inside of a handy cupboard door, and use it to hang up your ring and your wrist watch?

Ask Anne

DEAR ANNE:

How can I fasten travel posters to the cinder block walls of our recreation room? Rubber cement held for several weeks, but the posters are all falling down now. MRS. J. V. FLETCHER, 4172 36th st. se., Arlington, Va.

You could stick the posters to the wall with glue, plastic spray or the black adhesive that comes in tubes. However, it would have to be a pretty permanent installation as you'd probably have a spot on the wall when you took the poster off.

A plan that would be less damaging to the wall surface would be to use adhesive tape. You could color the tape with crayons to match the map edge in order to make it more inconspicuous.

DEAR ANNE:

I have unusually long fingers and it is very difficult for me to buy gloves to fit. I understand there is a place in Washington where one can buy handmade gloves to order. Can you tell me? Also, do you know of any classes in glove-making? MRS. J. E. M. Washington.

A firm that makes gloves to order and to fit the individual hands can be reached by telephoning EXecutive 0961. This store also conducts classes in glove-making.

Equality of the Sexes—New Version

Paris, March 29 (U.P.)—Gaston Waltener, men's fashion designer, sought today to put men on an equal footing with women by introducing silk shirts trimmed with two rows of ruffles and homburgs trimmed with red satin.

Highlights of his spring fashion show for males was a sport coat with 2½-foot wide shoulders and a pinched-in waist fastened with a drawstring to enable males to taper from their shoulders to a "mere wisp."

He said "the new line for men is svelte, with broad shoulders, pinched-in waist and absolutely no tummy and hips. The 1950 man should taper off from the shoulders into a mere wisp. If he doesn't, he should start dieting.

"At last man is on an equal plane with the woman," Waltener said.

Society On Its Toes for Ballet

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

AFTER the Ballet Theater's opening performance at Constitution Hall last night Mrs. Truman followed through to the Mayflower for the buffet supper given by Blevins Davis, president of the ballet's board and Miss Lucia Chase its founder. With the First Lady were Mr. and Mrs. James Bruce (he's Director of Mutual Defense Assistance of the State Department), Representative and Mrs. Clifford Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Stewart of New York and Washington and Mr. and Mrs. George Shaw of New York.

Queen Mary's Rug Makes D. C. Debut at Smithsonian

By Lucia Brown

THE RUG in which Queen Mary put a million loving stitches came to Washington yesterday.

It's on exhibition in the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, where Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, spoke at a preview yesterday afternoon.

Saying that Queen Mary's work "springs from an old national tradition of handicraft in Britain," Sir Oliver explained that the carpet will be shown in 21 American and Canadian cities, then sold to help narrow the "dollar gap."

"This gesture of Her Majesty is an apt symbol of the steady determination of Britain to make good the losses of six years of struggle," Sir Oliver told representatives of official and social Washington at the preview.

Certainly a great deal of determination was needed by the indomitable 82-year-old Queen to finish the 12-paneled carpet. It took her eight years, working six to seven hours a day. She used 480 different wools in the gentlest pastel shades, ranging from soft beige and gray backgrounds to pale blues and turquoises, greens, mauves, and ambers. Her Majesty started the rug as a gift for a member of her family, later decided the nation needed it more.

The work is entirely in needlepoint and each panel has a different design of brightly colored birds, fruit, and flowers with a border of blossoms edged in rich brown against a grass green background. All panels except one bear the signature "Mary R" with the date when it was finished.

The rug will be on public display at the Smithsonian Building at 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw., through Sunday.

League for Larger Life

The League for The Larger Life will celebrate its 29th birthday with an anniversary celebration, 8:30 p. m., Saturday, at Headquarters, 1626 Rhode Island ave. nw. Public Speaking Class Adopts New Name

Lady Rowan, wife of the British treasury representative here, gave a tea Monday afternoon for graduates of Mrs. Hugh Butler's Public Speaking Classes. Before the tea, there was a round table to find a new name for the classes, as Mrs. Butler is leaving soon for California. Mrs. Michael Straight took the chair, and it was decided to call the classes "Capital Public Speaking Classes Founded by Mrs. Hugh Butler."

At the tea were Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen, who is the new teacher of the classes.

Houseguests, Parties Keep Folks Busy

MRS. ROBERT WHITNEY IMBRIE will have with her for several days Vassar students Sally Curtiss Smith and Alice Davidson, who arrived yesterday. Miss Smith is the daughter of F. Harold Smith of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., who was a classmate of the late Major Imbrie at Yale. A son, Robert Imbrie Smith, was named for Major Imbrie.

The two girls are here for further study in their political science course.

Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Ambassador, was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the embassy.

Mrs. Guy Goff, who is living at the Brighton this winter, will entertain at tea—for ladies only—at the Sulgrave Club on Saturday. Mrs. Goff's daughter, Mrs. Carroll Reece, wife of former Representative Reece of Tennessee, and more recently, chairman of the Republican National Committee, will be here for the party.

Capt. William H. Gridley, USNR, and Mrs. Gridley of Woodacres, Md., will have as guests for several days, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Beck. Mr. Beck, formerly of Washington, is American Consul General in Southampton, England. The Becks have been on leave in California and are on their way back to England.

He is a director of American Security & Trust Co.; Merchants & Manufacturers Association; Better Business Bureau; D. C. Pharmaceutical Association; National Association of Chain Drug Stores, and the Associated Chain Drug Stores. He is a native of Tennessee, married, has two daughters and lives at 3150 Tennyson st. nw.

Beavers, the new board chairman, also rose from the ranks. He joined Peoples Drug in 1919 as a registered pharmacitist and served in various capacities until 1926 when he was elected treasurer. In 1928 he became a director and vice president and in 1933 he became executive vice president. In 1940 he was elected president. He lives at 121 Woodlawn ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

BACK IN BLACK: Trans-World Airline yesterday reported record 1949 revenues and its first net profit since 1945. Net income of $3,708,845 was equal to $1.53 a comman share. This contrasted with adjusted net loss of $1,278,000 in previous year. Gross revenues of $105,985,000 in 1949 set a new peak. Passenger revenues were up $5,867,000 while cargo receipts gained $493,000.

ROBOT AGE: The push-button era was well exemplified at an exhibit this week in the Willard Hotel, sponsored by the G. B. Macke Corp. of Washington. In a display of newest-type vending machines is one that serves hot coffee. Press a button and cream is added; push another and sugar falls in. Another novel slot robot serves four varieties of hot or cold drinks. Other new types serve ice cream and doughnuts. Aaron Goldman, president of the 24-year-old Macke firm, estimates there are in excess of 10,000 vending machines in Washington and predicts further expansion. Most popular, he asserts, is the cigarette machine.

MILDER BILL: Senator Ralph E. Flanders offered yesterday a milder substitute for a bill which would greatly increase the policy powers of the SEC. The Flanders proposal would require all corporations, regardless of size, to send each stockholder an annual statement "in sufficient detail" to tell the "true financial condition."

ODD LOTS: Management of Standard Cap & Seal Corp. of Richmond claimed a victory in a three-way proxy fight during which one faction charged management made improper transactions and "wasted two million dollars in futile attempts to develop a flexible vacuum process" . . . Kaiser-Frazer's new Frazer sedans will carry a factory price tag $36 lower than the preceding models . . . Splitup stock of Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore was admitted to trading yesterday on New York Stock Exchange.

NEW STORE: A second Chandler's shoe store will open Friday at 3109 Wilson blvd. in Clarendon, Va., under the management of Robert Bagget. Chandler's at 1208 F st. nw., is a unit of Edison Bros. Stores, Inc., which operates a chain of 218 shoe stores nationwide. Elmer L. Jeffry, regional manager, will assist at the formal opening of the Arlington County store.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Columnist Marquis Childs will speak at a dinner meeting Monday of the Washington Automotive Trade Association in the Carlton Hotel. . . . Joe Cummins, Robert King and Roscoe Crowell have been named to a nominating committee in connection with election of officers for Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants. . . . Syed Amjad Ali has been appointed minister for economic affairs at the Embassy of Parkistan here.

EARNINGS: National Steel Corp reported net income of $39,311,269 or $16.02 a share for 1949, compared with $40,121,506 or $16.35 a share in previous year. Other earnings statements:

Voters Group Plans Drive For Home Rule

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—Formation of a State-wide committee to work for the calling of a constitutional convention was voted today at a special meeting of the Maryland League of Women Voters.

Marylanders will vote in November on whether they want to call a constitutional convention. A telegram from the Maryland League of Municipalities indorsing the women voters' drive for a convention was read.

Declaring that the State constitution is outmoded and in need of overhauling, the telegram said that "the principal reason for the league's support of the convention call is the desire for municipal home rule.

"We have become convinced that we can expect members of the General Assembly, who make political capital from the present system, to support home rule.

"We believe that the best chance of increasing autonomy and relieving the General Assembly from the terrific burden of local legislation will be at the hands of the constitutional convention."

The message was signed by Mayor Thomas S. Post of Cumberland, president of the League of Municipalities.

Earlier in the day, John E. Bebout, former head of the Government Department of the University of Newark, told the woman voters that "to keep Government the servant of the people, we must keep as much power as possible at State and local levels.

He is now Assistant Secretary of the National Municipal League Committee on State Government.

Ground-Breaking Set at U. of Md. For New Apiary

Ground-breaking ceremonies for a new apiary on the campus of the University of Maryland at College Park will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday.

Approximately 100 bee-keepers are expected to attend. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the College of Agriculture; Dr. W. B. Kemp, director of the Experiment Station, and Dr. E. N. Cory, head of the entymology departments, will speak. Boy Scouts, 4-H Club members and Future Farmers of America will aid in the ground breaking.

A dozen basswood trees will be planted to provide forage for the bees. The traditional "blessing of the bees" by a bee-keeping clergyman will be a part of the ceremony, according to George J. Abrams, the apiculturist.

The building, 50 by 30 feet, will cost about $20,000 and is expected to be completed by July 1.

RCA Unveils 1-Tube Color TV Adaptable to Present Models

By Sonia Stein
Post Reporter

The Radio Corporation of America yesterday unveiled its multi-color single tube television receiver, believed by the company to be the last link needed to get practical color television in the home.

The demonstration for the press was the first for persons outside the RCA family, except for an unofficial demonstration for the Federal Communications Commission last Thursday. The commission will see the tube again April 6.

The program, a variety show originated at NBC's Wardman Park studios, was telecast on WNBW (channel 4) and received on two color sets and one black-and-white set in the NBC studios at 14th st. and New York ave. nw.

The new color sets, adapted to regular RCA television models, are considerably smaller than earlier RCA sets which used color pictures reflected from three tubes and superimposed on one another on a projection screen. The new tubes are viewed directly, as is usual with black and white receivers, and can be watched at an angle.

David Sarnoff, RCA board chairman, said a production model of the new tube will be ready in a few months, but tooling up and getting into mass production might require "one, two or three years." The tubes shown yesterday were hand-made. The production of tubes would depend on authorization by the FCC of the RCA system, he pointed out.

Sarnoff said he felt the commission should require all color systems to produce a picture that is not inferior in quality to black-and-white and compatible with present sets so color pictures may be received on them in black and white with no adaptation of the sets.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Pius XII Combines Mysticism, Talent for Practical Action

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek

Chapter XII—The Pope at Work

AS SECRETARY of State, the new Pope had already lived for nine years in Vatican City. From that tiny territory—barely a hundred acres in size—some 350 million Catholics, spread all over the world, are governed spiritually. On this hill near the River Tiber the wicked Emperor Caligula once built a circus, where the early Christians were thrown to the lions and where St. Peter, first Bishop of Rome, was crucified head down.

Three centuries later the first Christian Emperor, Constantine, built on the same spot a Basilica dedicated to St. Peter, the forerunner of the present Basilica. To the casual sightseer the Vatican, which for the last six centuries has been the principal residence of the Popes, is a city of palaces full of medieval pomp and renaissance splendor. But beneath all that sumptuousness the arduous and complex work of governing the world's greatest religious empire goes on. In his suite of rooms, immediately underneath the papal apartment, Cardinal Pacelli conducted during all those years the Vatican's official diplomatic relations with the Ambassadors and Ministers of some 40 states accredited to the Holy See.

Pope Pius XII, ever since overcoming the frailty of his youth, has been blessed with good health. He has a strong heart and a sound constitution, he lives frugally and is a nonsmoker (instead, so he tells friends, he gets his palliative out of assiduous newspaper reading; the principal papers in the languages which he has mastered are left with him every evening).

That he does not get easily tired he attributes to a concentrated and organized method of working. On the morning after his election he picked up the telephone on his desk at the usual hour, to tell his secretary that he was waiting.

Severe Routine

A POPE is no doubt the hardest worked person in the world, with a daily routine more severe than that of a head of state and head of government combined. For the Holy See is an autocracy. The whole enormous organization of the church centers round the Pope, who wields complete authority and has the final word in everything, being accountable to no one.

In the central organization of the Church the so-called Sacred Congregations are what the Executive Departments are in the administration of a country. The Pope himself is Prefect (head) of three: the Supreme Congregation; the Consistorial Congregation; and that of the Oriental Church. Cardinals, mostly, head the other nine Congregations; the Sacramental Congregation; that of the Council; of the Religious Orders; of the Propagation of the Faith (controlling all missionary activities); of Rites; of Seminaries and Universities; and finally the Congregation of the Fabric of St. Peter's.

There are three Tribunals; the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Segnatura, and the Roman Rota. Apart from these administrative and judicial divisions there is the executive side of Church organization, the six administrative offices; the Chancellery; the Datary; the Secretariat of State; the Apostolic Chamber; the Secretariat for Briefs to Princes, and the Secretariat for Latin Letters.

They all enjoy a certain measure of autonomy, but the Pope determines their policy and supervises their work. Spread over the week, he receives every day one of the heads to hear their report and guide their plans.

Breaks Traditions

A LARGE part of a Pope's day is reserved for audiences. Each of the 1200 Archbishops and Bishops of the Catholic Church is obliged to visit Rome once every five years, the canonical ad limina visit. This, in practice, means that there is one such important visitor almost every day for whom the Pope has to prepare by reading up previous reports so as to familiarize himself with the situation of his visitor's diocese. Then there are private audiences of distinguished personalities, arranged generally through their legations. Most of his time, however, is taken up by group audiences of pilgrims who have come from near and far to see the Pontiff, to kiss his ring, and to hear a fatherly word from his lips.

Pius XII has broken with many traditions; he moves freely among his visitors, and these functions have nothing of the rigidity which both his predecessor's age and temperament had imposed. Religious functions at which he has to appear as the central figure are another heavy toll on his time and on his physique. Every morning the hour from 9 to 10 is set aside for the Pope's daily consultation with his Secretary of State—reviewing the affairs of the world and the Church in general. It is not until the afternoon that the Pope can settle down to undisturbed study. A walk in the Vatican gardens or in those of the Vatican Villa in the Alban Hills is all the leisure which he can afford. For his responsibility and dignity never leave him; he cannot delegate them and has to carry their weight unto the grave.

The fact that he ascended the throne at an age below the average of his predecessors gives Pius XII a good expectation for a fruitful reign, an expectation heightened by the secret of his influence, the magnetism of his personality. His bearing, his manners—mirror of his temperament and judgment—are of a calm dignity. He has an air of abiding tranquillity; in fact in this serenity, paradoxical though it seems, there is something of utter worldliness. He is that rarest of combinations, a mystic and yet at the same time a practical man of action. Henry Bordeaux, the French Academician, once described him as an El Greco portrait come to life.

Hailed by Democracies

THAT alone stamps him as the man for the task in hand, for never was a pontiff elected in more anxious times, amidst the menacingly growing rumors of the war which was to break out barely six months later; amidst social, economic and political upheavals on a scale vaster than the world has witnessed ever before. In that clash of ideas and ambitions he was not the champion of any political ideology. When the democratic countries hailed his election, just as, before, the totalitarian countries had fulminated against its possibility, it was because Pacelli had realized that totalitarianism with its deification of temporary rulers, with its ever-growing claim on the conscience and soul of every citizen, makes complete liberty of conscience impossible.

When he denounced communism as the world's greatest evil, he did so because in wiping out the individuality of the family it destroys society. With it he bracketed nazism in the same breath, for it strikes, no less ruthlessly, at the individuality of the home, the very heart of religion. Both are tyrannically pagan. Most revealing was his choice for secretary of state—his closest collaborator—of Cardinal Maglione, whose liberal inclinations are known from his long years as nuncio in Paris, where, amongst others, he was the friend of Aristide Briand, that great European.

Pius XII shares to the full the human and courageous sentiments of Pius XI against all claims of the state to dominate the conscience of the individual, and against doctrines of racial persecution. He saw his "terrible responsibility," as he has called it, in the first place as an exhortation for peace between all nations—a peace based on "brotherly and reciprocal help, on friendly collaboration and cordial understanding," as he announced in his first allocution as Pope. That task he took up without shrinking.

A year before, in Budapest, during a spell of acute tension and dread anticipation of a German conflict with Czechoslovakia, he quoted his predecessor as having said: "I thank God day by day that He has made me live in this time. This deep, all pervading crisis, is unique in the history of mankind. One must be proud to be able to play one's part in this tremendous drama. Good and evil are interlocked in a gigantic struggle. Nobody has the right to be an onlooker at this momentous hour."

Six months later, on becoming Pope, he selected as his coat-of-arms a dove holding an olive branch in his beak, with as device, "Opus Justitiae Pax": The work of justice is peace.

Crosby Plugs Big 'Day' at Front Royal

Bing Crosby, whose equestrian plugs form the plot of his latest movie, used the radio variety yesterday to boost "Bing Crosby Day" at Front Royal, Va., Saturday.

He was a guest on Arthur Godfrey's morning program in Chicago. The two stars discussed their mutual interest in Virginia at some length, and Crosby told of the celebration at Front Royal, where he will dedicate a new municipal stadium named for him.

The singer, who contributed the first $1000 to the stadium fund, will be the guest of General Chairman Raymond R. Guest, a Virginia State Senator and long-time friend of Crosby.

Among several personal appearances Crosby will make is one at the premiere Saturday night of his new picture, "Riding High." It depicts him as an owner-trainer of race horses.

Coordinator James A. Payne announced from Front Royal that Senator A. Willis Robertson will join Governor John S. Battle at the dedication.

When day is done and when the sun . . . Is swallowed by the sea . . . I pray the stars will guide your ship . . . And bring you back to me . . . I pray the wind will blow your sail . . . Beyond the smallest storm . . . And every wave will pillow you . . . To keep you safe and warm . . . That every lantern will be bright . . . To lead and light the way . . . And you will anchor safely in . . . The shelter of our bay . . . The harbor of our happiness . . . Where every voyage ends . . . And as we share our thoughts and dreams . . . We are forever friends . . . I pray the moon will bring its beams . . . To sweep the widest sea . . . And help my heart to find your ship . . . And bring you back to me.

Drama From Reel Life Strikes Wrong Chords

One of Hollywood's axioms is that you've got to have "stars" in a picture in order to attract people to the box office.

I wonder if the movie moguls know—or care—that there are people like me in the audience? A minority, perhaps, but nevertheless potential customers.

As far as I'm concerned, the names of the stars are secondary. I pick a movie by reading Dick Coe's reviews until I find one in which he says there's no background music. That's my meat.

For the life of me, I can't understand why there should be "mood music" accompanying the dialogue. If a symphony orchestra were to grind away during all three acts of a stage play, theater-goers would think the producer a bit balmy. But in the movies, that's the accepted technique.

Hero Lionel Ladykiller squares his shoulders and slowly turns the knob of the door to the haunted house.

We shudder to think of the horrible fate that awaits him inside. We cringe in our seats as the lone figure of our hero moves stealthily into the darkened hallway.

But we invariably find that we've gnawed our fingernails needlessly, because our boy isn't really alone after all.

WELCOME, ZACH

When a contributor has had two items published in this space, he usually gets a card from the District Line Club, inviting him to join the group and attend the next meeting.

A card of that kind went out a few weeks ago to Zachary J. Balian, jr., of 1810 Wisconsin ave. nw. But Zach never showed up at the meeting, and I didn't know why until I got a letter from his mother yesterday.

It seems Zach is 9 years old. He was proud of the invitation he had received, and looked forward to the date of the next meeting.

But before he could join the club, he was struck down by a truck on his way home from school one day. And for the next month, Zach was flat on his back in a hospital.

Now he's getting well again, and except for a foot that's still causing some trouble, he's in pretty good shape for an old man of 9.

It won't be long before he'll be able to circulate a bit, and attend meetings.

Meantime, I'll bet that ailing foot would heal a little faster if the District Liners would suspend their rules and let their youngest recruit join up by mail. Is there a second for the motion?

WONDROUS HERBIE

I was passing through the sports department the other day when Herb (Wondrous Nats) Heft stopped me to ask:

"Who would you say held the all-time batting championship on the Pittsburgh Pirates?"

"Pirates?" I replied, trying furiously to think of the name of somebody who had played for the Smoketowners. "Pirates? Ummm. Let's see . . . "

"Would you say it was Honus Wagner?" prompted Herb. "Or Paul Waner?"

"Why, er, I guess it was Waner," I said. Herb smiled and shook his head.

"That's wrong," he chided. "It was Arky Vaughan. He hit .385 in 1935. That's never been topped."

"Then what do Waner and Wagner have to do with it?" I complained.

"Nothing," conceded Herb, "but I thought I'd give you a little hint."

GHI Reelects Joseph Himes As President

Joseph H. Himes, who helped found Group Hospitalization, Inc., Washington's Blue Cross Plan in 1934, has been reelected president of GHI for the seventeenth year.

Himes and Sidney F. Taliaferro, retiring trustee and treasurer, were commended by the GHI Board of Trustees for "faithful service." The organization gained 54,000 members in 1949 and on February 1 had more than 431,000 participants.

John M. Littlepage, vice president of Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, was appointed by GHI's contracting hospitals to succeed Taliaferro as trustee.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines was reappointed to the Board of Trustees by the District Commissioners and Frank R. Jelleff was reappointed by the District Medical Society. Bruce Baird was elected treasurer.

Other reelected officers were Alfred G. Neal, first vice president; Charles D. Drayton, second vice president, and Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, secretary.

Johnson Glosses 'Facts' on AF

By Drew Pearson

The U. S. defense picture is so complicated that it is difficult even for Congressmen who sit on Army-Navy appropriations committees to understand whether the United States is in danger of slicing its defenses too thin. However, here are some facts that Senators may want to study in connection with General Eisenhower's views on national defense.

Johnson

1. Secretary Louis Johnson has done a good job of cutting civilian personnel, political shipyards, old Indian forts, and other military "fat." Congressmen squawk loudest when local shipyards and military posts are curtailed, but Johnson has had the courage to cut anyway.

2. New weapons, which cannot be described here, may make a lot of present weapons obsolete. It's a waste of money, therefore, to accumulate an arsenal of conventional weapons that may be out of date in a year or so.

3. Regarding the Air Force, considered the Nation's main striking arm, Secretary Johnson has not given the public a true picture of the facts. The real fact is that the Air Force is far behind the standard set for it by Congress.

Deceptive Figures

It should be recalled, of course, that it was President Truman, not Secretary Johnson, who flouted the congressional vote that the Air Force should be 70 groups strong. Johnson wanted 54 groups, but Truman cut to 48.

But perhaps because of superloyalty to his chief, Johnson has not been frank with the Nation regarding the real status of our air strength. Here is a case in point.

One of Johnson's most important statements on United States air strength was given to the press on February 24 for release—Johnson explained to newsmen—at 7 p. m., February 25, in order to give his friend, Arthur Krock, time to break the story in the New York Times.

In this statement, the Secretary of Defense claimed that Air Force personnel had now surpassed the figure of 401,000 men set for it in the Finletter report—the study made by Tom Finletter and other experts as to what our air strength should be.

When you scrutinize Johnson's statement carefully, however, you arrive at somewhat different facts. While it is true that Air Force personnel now totals 415,000 men, the Finletter figure of 401,000 men provided that ground services—repairs, upkeep of airfields, hangars, etc.—be done by the Army. Now the Air Force must furnish its own ground services, hence it needs more manpower.

Too Few B-36s

Johnson also told newsmen that the B-29 bomb groups had been doubled, thus giving the impression that the Air Force now has as many planes with 48 groups as it would have with 70 of the smaller groups. In other words, B-29 groups used to have 30 planes; now, Johnson said, they have 60.

But the Secretary of Defense didn't give the whole story. He didn't explain, for instance, that 15 of the extra planes with each group of 60 are tankers. They fly along for refueling purposes, have no combat value. Furthermore, each group has been authorized 20 tankers, though they have only 15. Moreover, the B-29s are fast becoming obsolete and are supposed to be replaced with B-50s. However, only one of the nine groups has actually been replaced with B-50s so far.

Actually, the Air Force today has only 3400 first-line planes. This is the hard, inescapable fact. Under the 70-group air force, on the other hand, as recommended by the Finletter report, it should have 6869 first-line planes.

These are the facts regarding the Nation's air strength.

Eighth St. Kst. N.W. Today at CENTER MARKET CITY
...with Pat Parker

SINCE THIS is the Lenten season, and fish is such an important part of our diet at this time of the year, we're devoting our columns this week to seafood.

Center Market City's famous seafood stands are well supplied with good things from the waters of the Eastern seaboard. Both Javins' and Thompson's stands are known throughout this area.

SO FOR some hints on serving fish. Fish should be kept cool in the refrigerator until you are ready to cook it. How to keep the odor from penetrating? It should be kept tightly covered, or should be stored in a separate compartment. It should be packed in cracked ice, rubbed with salt or wrapped in waterproof parchment paper.

FISH should be served with contrasting color accompaniments. Since most fish are light in color and mild in taste, contrast may be had by serving crisp vegetables, bright in color, such as beets, red cabbage, tomatoes, cucumbers and pickles.

Acid flavors are "naturals" with fish, especially fatty fishes. For this reason, the usual accompaniment is lemon. Relishes and green salads with dressings may make good flavor contrasts.

Garnishes may be used—for instance, sliced lemon, parsley, sliced tomatoes, watercress, radishes, cucumbers or sliced eggs. Sauces that go well with seafoods are Tartare, Hollandaise, Maitre d'Hotel, Caper, Creole, Cucumber, Lemon, Egg, Spanish and Mushroom sauces.

Some fish dishes are excellent when served cold. A cold salmon platter, served with mayonnaise and capers is an excellent idea for a warm day.

WHATEVER fish you choose from the plentiful supplies at our Market, you can be sure that it will be fresh, that you'll find plenty of variety, and that you will find our merchants most helpful in suggesting dishes.
